Vahey Says Bay State Trustees Want Strike

SHANTUNG DEFEAT FOR WILSON

Foreign Relations Committee Votes, 9 to 8, in Favor of Restoration to China

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 23.—The Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, by a vote of 9 to 8, today voted in favor of the return of Shantung concession to China instead of Japan.

The committee voted to strike out the word "Japan" wherever it occurs in Articles 156, 157 and 158 of the Treaty of Versailles, and insert the word "China."

Senator McCumber, Republican, of North Dakota, voted with the Democrats in opposition to the motion. Senators Shields, Hitchcock and Pittman, Democrats, were not present, but by agreement their votes were recorded in the negative.

The motion to strike out the word "Japan" and insert "China," was made by Senator Lodge, Republican, chairman of the committee.

An emphatic denial was made by Senator Lodge that he had even intimated that it was the purpose of the committee to report the treaty to the Senate within a week or otherwise hastily to conclude the consideration it required.

Lodge followed up his denial with the announcement that the committee still lacked official information essential to complete consideration of the treaty, and that it had decided again, at request of President Wilson official information which he had thus far denied it.

Open hearings were to be continued so as to allow those advocating the right of Ireland, Egypt, Persia, India, the former German colonies in Africa, Korea, and even Scotland to appear before the committee.

Senator Lodge also intimated that another month at least might lapse before the committee would be ready to report the treaty.

POSTPONE VOTE ON STRIKE

Bay State Referendum Set for Monday; Vahey Accuses Trustees of Forcing Fight

The trustees of the Bay State Street Railway Company were today accused by James H. Vahey, counsel for the carmen, of trying to force the men to strike.

Declaring the situation squarely up to the trustees, Mr. Vahey expressed doubt that they would do anything to avert the threatened walkout, and said they were seeking to divert public sympathy against the men in order to divert attention from "the highest street car fares in the world."

"We have been asked what we are doing," said the carmen's lawyer. What are the trustees doing, except standing pat on an invalid wage award?"

Today's developments found the carmen and the trustees as far apart as ever, and a strike next week apparently inevitable.

The referendum of the men has been postponed until Monday, and consequently it is improbable that if a strike is voted the men will quit the cars before Wednesday morning.

QUESTIONS IN REFERENDUM.

In the referendum the men will be asked whether they favor the present award; whether they favor a new arbitration board, as suggested by their international officers; whether they wish the validity of the War Labor Board's award of August 12 tested by a special board; and whether they favor a strike, if an agreement cannot be reached within a reasonable time.

If the men vote in favor of a strike, the time of the walkout will probably be decided by a sub-committee and the international officers, after efforts to get concessions from the trustees have failed.

Mr. Vahey's statement was the

RUMANS WARNED TO STOP LOOTING

Paris, Aug. 23.—The Supreme Council is sending Rumania a warning that unless looting ceases in the environs of Budapest, Rumania will lose her share of reparations from Germany and Austria, it was learned this afternoon. The Rumanians are further warned they must return all materials carried off. The council has not yet received official notification of the resignation of Archduke Joseph as head of the Hungarian government.

20 DAYS' RATIONS FOR U.S. TROOPS IN MEXICO

By International News Service.

Marfa, Tex., Aug. 23.—Twenty days' rations and supplies have been sent to the American troops across the border in the past three days, it was learned here this afternoon. This is taken to indicate that the chase of the Mexican bandits is to be kept up for some time yet.

Reinforcements of American troops and machine guns have been brought up and stationed at strategic points along the Mexican border. All the American army posts in the Big Bend section have been strengthened.

This move was explained today by army officers as merely a precautionary measure and in the nature of a practice maneuvers for the men. No apprehension is felt of an attack at any point in this district, either by the bandits or Carranista troops. Nor have the officers any fear of a clash between the Carranistas and the troops of the Eighth Cavalry, now pursuing the Mexican outlaws.

American cavalrymen rode hard all day Friday through the mountains without again coming in contact with any groups of the outlaw gang of Jesus Renterio that held two American airmen for ransom, according to reports reaching headquarters.

The Carranista troops in the

FLOUR IS RETURNED TO OWNERS

The 16,526 bags of flour seized by Federal agents last Saturday at the Market Warehouse Company plant in South Boston were released by the government today and returned to the owners.

The release followed a ruling by United States Judge Morton that the government had failed to produce evidence of hoarding.

The big flour seizure was one of the two decisive moves made by Department of Justice officials in Boston against alleged profiteers. The other was the seizure of vast stores of sugar in Charlestown, the sugar being released after two days, and a similar breakdown in the case for the government.

Assistant District Attorney Shea, in explaining the collapse of the government drive against the warehousing, said the company was within its rights, and that last Saturday's raid was made partly because company officials were suspiciously "secretive."

The funeral of Caspar Berry was held from his late home, No. 24 Highland avenue, Cambridge, Rev. Merrill Ward of Jamaica Plain, officiating, and interment was in Mount Auburn Cemetery.

CURTIS PLANS NEW BOSTON FORCE

Police Commissioner Curtis took an important step in his preparedness movement today when he announced that a volunteer police force would be enrolled for active duty, with William H. Pierce, former superintendent of police, in the guise of enrolling officer.

Mr. Pierce will receive the names of those who desire to serve on Monday morning at 9 o'clock in the Chamber of Commerce Building.

In addition to his volunteer force of policemen Commissioner Curtis will in all probability have the assistance of the Metropolitan Park police department in the event of the strike. These men, highly trained, are ready for any eventuality.

The Park Commission already has taken some steps toward aiding Boston in the event of trouble. Men have been chosen, some of them by lot, to come to Boston for strike duty. These men are completely equipped with revolvers, riot guns and long clubs.

STATEMENTS FROM CURTIS.

The following statement was issued from Commissioner Curtis' office:

Commissioner Curtis said that he had provided for contingencies arising whereby he may feel called upon to ask for unpaid volunteers to do police work in the city of Boston in the following manner:

He has called in ex-superintendent Pierce and certain other former officers of the police department as his counselors to organize and equip such a force, believing as he does that the citizens of Boston are able and willing to protect their own property and families from the

HOOVER SAYS U. S. MUST USE CLUB ON HUNGARY

REPUBLICS SEND CRY FOR AID

New Nations of Middle Europe Menaced by Hapsburg Plot, Says Food Director

Paris, Aug. 23.—Unless the United States stops pussyfooting and once and for all makes it plain to the Archduke Joseph that the United States will never recognize any Hapsburg as head of the Hungarian government, all recently created republic in central Europe will be lost to their existence threatened by a tyrant by reviving autocratic order.

Herbert C. Hoover, fighting mad, thus declared himself following his appearance before the Supreme Council of Five, where, it is understood, he urged immediate action in Hungary, the United States' most powerful nation the peace conference can command to force the Archduke out of power and get the Hungarians out of the country.

The first of these two desired results appears to have been achieved, for dispatches say the Archduke has resigned. But the Hungarians are still there, and their expulsion from Hungary is equally as imperative, according to Hoover, as he is helping in the bud of a plan for the restoration of the Hapsburg autocracy.

"PUSSY-FOOTING" MUST STOP.

"Washington must act," said Mr. Hoover. "It must diddy-ally no longer with the Hungarian situation. The American peace delegation here realizes the necessity of immediate action, but Washington officials suspend definite and forcible instructions.

"It is high time that we stop this pussy-footing with things that are loaded with fire.

"Diplomatic action now at Budapest can solve the situation in five days. But the delay of a week in such activities will have made themselves so strong that they can be removed only at the cost of much bloodshed.

"Eastern Europe has lost all respect for diplomatic methods such as the notes, threats, and reiteration of the peace conference.

CLUB IS PROPER THING.

"The only thing that will handle that situation is a club. America must speak, from America, and I am to President Wilson to make a statement.

"The presence of a reactionary Hapsburg as the head of the Hungarian government has caused a wave of panic to sweep through democratic Central Europe. It is most pitiful to see how the shadow line falls in the hearts of the peoples there. They are tasting freedom for the first time in their lives.

"We came into this war for democracy versus autocracy. Millions of Americans entered the war to destroy the exponents of these autocratic and militaristic factions. We consider that we shall have fought in vain if one of them comes back into power.

NEW NATIONS CALLING US.

"For our government to sit down idly and let such things be put over as it is beyond the understanding of any red-blooded Yankee.

"New republics, seeing the light for the first time, are calling on us for action. Are we going to ignore their voice after the great promises we made ourselves when we entered the war?"

Mr. Hoover told the correspondents they could quote him in everything he said.

"You can't make it strong enough," he said. "America must wake up to this situation."

The food chief was vigorously puffing away at a cigarette during the entire interview. He seemed perfectly clear he thought the United States must almost single handed handle the situation. Instead if peace is to be restored in central Europe and autocracy once and for all laid in the grave.

BITTER AGAINST RUMANIANS.

Nor was any love lost between him and the Rumanians. His attention was drawn to Rumanian newspaper attacks against him. He laughed like a boy and promised to live up to "as good a reputation."

"The presence of the Rumanians makes food relief for Hungary impossible," he said. "While we are willing to subsist it is going out of the country as fast as it comes into the other day. I learned in Rumania under the very noses of the Rumanian officers, requisitioned food, train loads of food supplies that were to go to Hungary.

"The Rumanians know these children are practically dying. They had no objections, and as a matter of fact, fostered the idea. True, I know the Rumanians have suffered terribly under the Germans, but they do not need clothes, food or medical supplies."

THE SENTIMENT OF 1778.

The spirit and sentiment that prompts the Americans of Irish descent to desire Ireland to full independence is identical with the feeling that swept the thirteen colonies in '76 and resulted in the overthrow of British authority in the United States. In tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser Daniel F. O'Connell, LL. D., director of the Irish National bureau at Washington, D. C., writes on the movement that has progressed to a state where a highly efficient "clearing house" for the issuance of correct information on the Irish situation has been created. He explains what it has done and what it means to do.

General Sweetser Endorses Effort for War Cripples

Editor Boston American:

I read Mr. Power's article in the Sunday Advertiser on crippled soldiers with great interest and I am glad that someone, who is as familiar with the subject as he is is placing the matter before the public.

The responsibility of an officer in the service for his men does not cease altogether when the war is over and both have been discharged, and, in this connection, I am interested in obtaining for discharged soldiers all that they have been promised and are justly entitled to.

Respectfully yours,

E. LEROY SWEETSER.

CURTIS CALLS FOR VOLUNTEER POLICE FORCE

nels of any disorderly persons.

Superintendent Pierce can be found in Room D, third floor, Chamber of Commerce Building, after 9 a. m. Monday, where he will receive the names of all volunteers. Persons applying to him should identify themselves or take with them some recommendation which may be readily investigated.

If there is a sufficient of policemen commissioned, the Curtis plan for citizens of patrolmen remaining who are not members of the union, will be carried out. Similar to that of the Lindsey street station there are 24 men, under Lieutenant Downing, 35 Jackson Place, Brighton; 50 Hanover, 21 West Roxbury; 60 Hanover street, 1577 Dorchester; Hall avenue, 15 Jay street, 151 Ingraham street; 5 Hazlett, 1 Bellflower street, 22 and 1 Bird Street.

It is presumed that in the business sections of the city some members of the union will be on duty, and it can be arranged with sergeants and lieutenants to help in case there can be found time.

While the strike has not officially been declared, it is understood that many leaders of the executive will receive orders resigning the involvement of the police department in such duty that will be the completion of such duty as they are now engaged in. Many of the men have been on duty since Tuesday.

In event of no strike order being issued, it is presumed that the police commissioner will keep them on duty until the completion of the tour. This is not definitely known, however, as the police department officials will not have ready for them at once. Should the strike be declared on the day that in the event of a strike Mayor Curtis would call upon the police department to help in the maintenance of law and order. He is in confident telephonic communication with Police Commissioner Curtis and Superintendent Pierce. Mr. Curtis, official of City Hall stated that there is no cause for alarm and that the police department is in the situation.

PREPARE FOR TRIAL.

Preparations in connection with the investigations for the trial of both members of the Boston police department, especially those charged with the leadership of the strike, are being made by Attorney General Attorney Dever, as it is the opinion of the commissioner in many quarters that the body must have counsel to represent it. It is expected that at least two members might be named.

Captain Stanley C. Armstrong, assistant chief inspector, has never been named a station nor has he ever handled any of the men named. Captain Patrick King, lieutenant, drill master and automobile officer, is another man who otherwise loaded. Captain Thomas Hall, as far as is known, it might be that Captain Perley Skillings, who retains from Dorchester, since the most recent appointee and the latter the highest master for several years, will be chosen.

Union leaders profess not to care who might be chosen in any of the cases. They have retained James H. Vahey and John F. Feeney to represent them, however. In some circles it seems a foregone conclusion that the strike will be terminated by the end of the week, the majority of violations of section nine of rule thirty-two of the rules and regulations from the department.

Union leaders profess not to care who might be chosen in any of the cases. They have retained James H. Vahey and John F. Feeney to represent them, however. In some circles it seems a foregone conclusion that the strike will be terminated by the end of the week, the majority of violations of section nine of rule thirty-two of the rules and regulations from the department.

Members of the union claim that if any new police officials they should be given representation on the board of police commissioners from the ranks of the department or body generally in the event of the present Curtis plan of their members and those not members of the union, while agreeing to help in the emergency, will not be willing to help in the future to help them.

Efforts were made in vain to point toward communication of Mayor Peters rather than the commissioner. The men are willing to help Mayor Curtis, but are not willing to aid in assuring the police department. They say that the refusal of their pleas for more men to take care of the duties of the police comes from City Hall rather than from police square.

FRIEND OF POLICEMEN.

If that be the case, persons not members of the union, yet members of the police force have reason for attacking the commissioner of police, for it is declared that the men attack the commissioner in the strictest sense of the word. But in organized and in threatening to strike they attack him there men are "Frank understand." Such a veteran inspector today. What the men are thinking of. The present commissioner is a friend of the uniformed man. He is ever willing to aid him in securing better conditions. He can't appropriate the money without the consent of the mayor. The mayor has refused to grant more money.

ARREST DETECTIVES CAUGHT SPYING ON RICH MAN'S DAUGHTERS

NEW YORK POLICE IN DARK

Dictaphones Installed in Apartment Without Apparent Reason

New York, Aug. 23.—Miss Estelle Newman and Miss Frances Newman, daughters of Nathan Newman, wealthy antique dealer of No. 145 East Twenty-seventh street, are not perturbed by the knowledge that detectives for five weeks have been listening by way of dictaphones to their private conversations.

Why the dictaphones were installed in the Newman apartment is a mystery that baffles not only the family but the police and the district attorney's office.

Mr and Mrs. Newman went on a second honeymoon about six weeks ago, leaving the two daughters and a son, Samuel, who is a medical student at Bellevue, in charge of the apartment. There is still another daughter, Adele, nineteen, a law student at New York University, who is on a vacation.

The parents had hardly left town. It appears, when "electricians" called at the apartment. Miss Estelle responded.

"Your lights are out of order, are they not?" asked one.

"Oh, no," the young woman said. "They were all right last night."

INSTALL TWO DICTAPHONES.

"Better try them," said the caller. "We are from the company and have been sent here to fix your lights."

Miss Newman tried and there was no current. So the men went to work. They were so pleasing in manner and so eager to work (they did so late into the night) that she lost all suspicion.

Indeed, she handed a $2 tip to one of them and he accepted it.

Yet all the time the men were installing two dictaphones, one in the living room, the other in the bathroom. Also they were tapping the telephone wires.

The dictaphones did service for the detectives until Mr. and Mrs. Newman returned. Mr. Newman discovered them concealed in picture mouldings. He traced the wires to the cellar and informed the district attorney's office. Detectives were put on the case, and on Thursday last found Anthony Senes and Harry Von Pelt of the Senes Detective Agency, No. 1Bi Broadway, at the receiving ends of the dictaphones. They, with John Jacobson, superintendent of the building, and Mr. Newman himself, were taken to the Tombs Court. All were paroled for hearing in the Yorkville Court Monday at 2 o'clock.

REVELATIONS PROMISED.

Senes and his associates refused to reveal the identity of the person who employed him to install the dictaphones. He admitted the work had cost about $2500. Assistant District Attorney Boston said the district attorney's office would prosecute the detectives to the limit. He said:

"Eavesdropping is a misdemeanor, and we shall ask to have them punished."

The police have considered several theories in their effort to find the motive. They thought at first of a love affair, but the Newman girls soon dispelled that idea. Finally they concluded to take Senes at his word and wait for the hearing Monday.

Senes promises "sensational revelations."

ITALIAN CAMPAIGN FOR LIGHT WINES

Providence, Aug. 23.—Fifty-four organizations and clubs in the State representing Sons of Italy are opposed to prohibition and favor light wines and beers. They propose to invade Massachusetts and other New England States and gather the Italian societies for the purpose of forming a great political action. Chairman G. M. Scotti outlined a campaign to the delegates representing the organizations in session here, a part of which will be sending a committee to Boston to discuss the question with Italian organizations.

CAR KILLS WOMAN RETURNING FROM SURF

Lawrence, Aug. 23.—While returning from the surf after bathing, Mrs. Emma Lamprey Neel, wife of a tailor of No. 22 Jandreau street, this city, was struck by a trolley car at York Beach, Me. She died at York Harbor Hospital.

Her daughter, Marion, was with her at the time. It is thought that her attention was attracted by a flying airplane and she did not see the approaching trolley.

Besides her husband and daughter she leaves one brother, Sylvester Lamprey, of Providence, R. I.

Cassell was taken to the Frost Hospital, Chelsea, suffering from a cut over the left eye, said to have been inflicted by McGlone with a shovel.

Waltham to Become Seat of New Style Decent Dancing

Waltham will be the American headquarters of Terpsichore, Goddess of the Dance, following the convention of dancing teachers to be held in New York beginning Monday, according to local teachers leaving today for the meeting. The convention is expected to pass resolutions for the establishment at Waltham of a bureau of information, instruction and the elimination of objectional steps and movements, including the "shimmy," from modern dances.

This bureau will be in charge of George I. Walters of Waltham, secretary of the national organization, and the Watch City long the envy section burg of measured time, will become also the seat of dancing. The manifestoes of the bureau, sent anywhere on request, will tell what the dancing teachers approve and of what they disapprove as dancing steps and the "etiquette of the dance."

WILL DENOUNCE JAZZ.

From advance comments of the members, there is no doubt that the list of disapprovals will be a long one. Here are some of the things it will denounce:

Shimmery, shivery, wiggling movements of the torso.

Strangle-holds.

Dancing from the waist up.

Cow-bell, tin-pan tunes, designed for modern dances.

Jazz in any form.

Its stamp of hearty approval it is announced, will be placed on a tempo which is "a happy medium between the colonial minuette and the shimmy."

"You can say that we shall certainly take drastic measures to put out the 'shimmy' and all similar public exhibitions of 'vulgarity,'" said Professor Bonnell. "The public and the police forceful measures to eliminate these objectionable and unnecessary features."

Theatrical managers are to blame for the degenerate condition of the dance, according to Miss Luella Hanson of New Orleans, quoted in a New York dispatch as saying:

"Theatrical managers seem determined to make professional dances as vulgar as possible, and add insult to injury by making teachers adopt them from the stage. Young people see these dances and immediately imitate them—and with startling success, too. Thousands of dollars are being wasted every year to pay dance hall inspectors. We intend to make dancing so decent that these inspectors will have nothing to do."

MUST EDUCATE PUBLIC.

Miss Hanes' sentiments were echoed by a number of teachers, including Thomas McDougall of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Miss F. Kohl of Madison, Wis.; Mrs. Gus Zimmermann of Cleveland; Fred Christensen of Seattle, Wash.; E. B. Raynor of Chicago; E. R. Everetts of Houston, Tex.; Miss Ella Knowles of New York and Mr. and Mrs. Blynn of Rockford, Ill.

President Fenton Bott of Dayton, O., said:

"Immoral dancing has gone as far in one direction as an impatient public will permit it to go. Either the dancing masters must educate the people to discard suggestive movements in the ball room or justly alarmed parents will demand that the police abolish all dancing just as they have banished John Barleycorn."

Do you call the shimmy dancing? Well, I'll tell you the history of that dance.

"It was first discovered four years ago in a negro dance hall in Chicago. Several instructors saw the negroes going through the movements and, seeing an opportunity to make money, introduced it in society.

"You can't reform dancing, though until you reform music, abolish the jazz—that horrible medley of cowbells, drums and wash boilers. Modern music compels you to adopt these jerky steps and we intend to introduce a tempo to take the place of these syncopations.

"Women police in every large city in the country have been trying in vain to fight this evil and we are now going to help them. The welfare workers really do not know themselves what proper dancing is. The bureau will solve that problem for them.

"Refined people will voluntarily adopt proper steps and positions; others will be made to."

Miss Christensen of Portland, Ore., blamed "the melting pot class" for "these startling conditions."

"When women stop twisting their spines into sailors' knots and dance from the waist down instead of the waist up, the ballroom will become a safe place for refined young girls," he asserted with energy.

"Our music today is filled with half notes and three-quarter notes and it seems the most natural thing in the world to do a contortion act instead of executing an artistic step.

"No wonder our European allies are alarmed over the introduction of American dancing in their hitherto dignified circles. Our music—the so-called typical American music—is nothing but an adaptation of the negro cakewalk.

DANCING IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

"We are establishing a national school for music and dancing and it will set the standard for dancing throughout the country. It is very singular that the government should have accepted dancing classes from a war tax on the ground that they are a part of the nation's educational system. Dancing should become part of the curriculum of all public schools."

MEN WHO SERVED BENEFIT BY WILL

Employes of the American Radiator Company who went into the service were declared to be employes in good standing, entitled to benefits under the will of the late John B. Pierce, in a finding by Judge Dow in Salem Probate Court. The executors of President Pierce's will petitioned against Charles K. Foster and others, asking instructions as to whether benefits to employes, left by the former president in his will, should accrue to those employes who went into war service.

HOME-RUNNING TO FAME.

Babe Ruth, the celebrated pitcher, left fielder and home-run hitter par excellence of the Boston Red Sox, is writing a working series of articles on baseball for the Boston Sunday Advertiser, the national game of 1919 as it looks to him. He has chosen as his subject "Pat Moran, the Miracle Manager of the Cincinnati Reds." It's pickand-ensine we'll soon offer the shattering of the home-run record by the "colossus," with prove of added interest to all lovers of baseball.

CHARGE TWO BOYS WITH ROBBERIES

George Normandy, seventeen, of College street, Revere, and George W. Young, eighteen, said to have escaped from the Lyman School, were arrested in East Boston, charged with several breaks in Stoneham. The boys, who were turned over to Chief of Police Sumner Green of Stoneham, are said to have admitted breaking into houses in Somerville, but denied similar offences in Stoneham.

BIG AIR RACE FROM MINEOLA TO TORONTO

Washington, Aug. 23.—A reliable handicap flight, under the auspices of the Army Air Service, will take place between Mineola, L. I., and Toronto, Can. The race will be a two way flight and will start August 25, weather permitting.

It is expected that about fifty entries, civilian as well as military, will essay the test. In this flight all types of machines will be used, including those built for the return leg. Rating will be made on the direct land return journey. Canada has promised a number of entries for the return trip and this feature will make the flight international in character.

Brigadier-General William Mitchell, chief of training and operations of the air service, U. S. A., announced today that the army would participate in the New York-Toronto air race. This plane will be manned by two officers recently returned from France. They are Lieutenant-Colonel Lewis H. Brereton, now chief of operations of the air service, and Major Elmer E. Haslett of Los Angeles, now assistant to the chief of training and operations of the air service.

Colonel Haslett will carry the personal greeting of General Mitchell to Sir Sam Hughes, Canadian minister of militia. General Mitchell is chief of the air service of the Army of Occupation, and visited the Prince for several days at Coblenz, and at that time flew with him on an extended trip over the Rhine country.

COURT ORDERS ACTORS NOT TO STRIKE

'Somebody's Sweetheart' Cast Is Enjoined From Going Out at Boston

To prevent a possible strike among the members of the company which is to produce 'Somebody's Sweetheart' at the Shubert Theatre this coming week the Arthur Hammerstein Enterprises corporation has secured from Judge Lawton of the Superior Court a temporary injunction.

The respondents named in the bill are Louise Allen, John Dunsmure, Eva Fallon, Natalie Howe, Ardelle Cleaves, Eugene Redding, Royal Cutler, Albert Sackett and Veronica Conwell, all members of the company, and Francis Wilson and Frank Gillmore, president and secretary of the Actors' Equity Association. An order of notice has been made returnable on Wednesday next.

The plaintiff says that on June 18 he entered into a contract with the Shubert Theatrical Company to give the musical play of "Somebody's Sweetheart" at the Shubert Theatre from August 23 to October 11 and it is alleged that the respondents agreed in writing not to leave the company, or cease to take its or her part, without giving notice of from one to two weeks.

It is alleged that it would be impossible to fill the places of the performers if they should suddenly quit at the solicitation of the Actors' Equity Association, which is charged with attempting to bring about a sympathetic strike in Boston in aid of one now in progress among actors in New York.

TO DISCHARGE YANKEE SAILORS AT BOSTON

New England members of the United States Navy will be discharged at the Charlestown Navy Yard hereafter, according to an order from Washington. The order is the result of so many complaints reaching the department that men from the New England States are being paid off at other points, become stranded before they can get home.

As each is discharged he is given his back pay, his mileage to his home in the West or South, even by the government, but judging by reports the system is not working as it should, as take in the shirts and the money is soon gone.

SAILORS WEAR ARMY DISGUISE

Seamen William Vernon Adams, late of the U. S. S. Charleston, and Howard W. Vincent of the U. S. S. North Dakota, disguised in soldier uniforms, are held in $500 each by operatives at a vaudeville show and brought before intelligence officers at the Parker House for explanation. For explanation.

They were discovered, according to the examining officers, that Adams had jumped ship at Philadelphia last July 4, and Vincent had left his ship at Rockport two weeks ago.

CROSS STOLEN FROM OVERSEAS VETERAN

An overseas veteran, now in hospital recovering from a gassing received in France, has asked the American to assist him in locating a cross which he states was stolen after he retired to this country.

The soldier, who is Sergeant Clarence C. Bird, of the American Legion at the Post Hospital, Fort McKinley, Portland, Maine, described the cross as being about three inches long and sixteen inches across, with a white enamel cross, which had been broken attached. The cross is colored with lavender beads.

AT GROCERS-

OLD FIRE JOB IS DENIED TO SERVICE MAN

Commissioner Murphy, However, Says Hall Resigned to Better Himself

Charging that the city of Boston, through Fire Commissioner John R. Murphy, has broken its pledge to reinstate men who served in the war, Harland E. Hall of No. 95 Bayview avenue, Quincy, declared yesterday he refused his position as a member of the fire department in which he served for nearly three years before entering service.

"You'll have to wait," is what Commissioner Murphy said when he applied for his former position, Hall declares. The policeman waiting sat ninety-nine days before he was asked to register, in order to enter a fire department which was headed by a lieutenant-detective of Philadelphia that Mr. Murphy found to be a friend of the fire department.

"There is a civil service rule which permits reinstatement without examination within a year from the date of resignation," he said. "So Boston is to keep its promise to give men who served in the army their old positions, why doesn't he tell state me?"

NOT A CASE OF BROKEN FAITH.

Commissioner Murphy admitted the rule and said that either Hall could be restored to his position before the year following the regular term expired. Asked why he did not give him back his position he replied:

"Because I propose to give preference to the war veterans who have passed the civil service examinations, and have qualified for promotion. Mr. Hall left the department because he believed he was entitled to a position. I do not regard it as a case of broken faith. He put himself out of his opportunity. Getting on a service man by resigning."

Commissioner Murphy declared there was nothing to prevent Hall's stand and that he could not know Hall. Asked if there was any objection to Hall's record as a member of the department, he replied that he was not aware of anything.

Hall declares he has a wife and family to support and that he does not know how long his position as electrician in Fore River shipyards will last because he was subsequently laid off there. He contends that his record in the department is excellent. He was for a time driver of Engine 11 and later driver of Engine 16 of Charlestown.

Hall served in the army from October 5, 1917, until the spring of 1919. His resignation as a member of the fire department took place on February 14, 1918, soon he was at Camp Meigs, Washington.

GOT THE GLAD HAND.

"We were encouraged to enlist the service and were told that our jobs were waiting for us when we came back. All we got is the glad hand," Hall declared. "The men are greatly disgusted with the way they have been treated and the way their promises were broken. I entered the fire department because I was encouraged to do so and I worked hard to serve the department. I was the best fitted to serve. I was forced to resign from the department and I did. So did Brennan from other reasons.

"Promises that were made to me to be carried out when I reenlisted were not kept and I left. I can see any obstacle in the way of my getting my position back if Commissioner Murphy wanted to put me back."

Hall declared that he has taken the matter up with the Mayor's office, and had been referred by the mayor's secretary, E. V. R. Parker, that the matter had been taken up with Commissioner Murphy, and that the Mayor could do nothing for him.

AUTO PLATE TRAPS BOGUS COLLECTORS

Lawrence, Aug. 23—Hoped to be the local police have discovered that revenue collectors are at work in Lawrence. Two men called at a Water street store and collected revenue money for the United States government under false pretenses.

Following the collection of war tax receipts at this store they made another attempt, it is said, to collect a man who took the number of their auto plate and informed the police. The registration number showed that the machine which did carry such a plate is owned by Leo E. Skinner of No. 316 Western avenue, Lynn, Mass., worker. The Lynn police, assisted by the internal revenue officers, find that the owner of the machine is connected with the government committee, according to the local police.

PRIVATE SALE OF ARMY FOOD IS DENIED

Mrs. J. S. Fox Admits, However, That Two Concerns Got All of It

Denial that there was any private sale of army food to the wife of Senator Weeks, a charge which deprived several hundred people of that section of the opportunity of buying any, was made today by Mrs. J. S. Fox, in charge of the sale at the Municipal building, East Broadway.

"There was no private sale to anyone," Mrs. Fox asserted. "I was in the building on Thursday with two assistants and the food was on sale then. The Walworth company and Morrison Brothers had just as much right to buy army food as anyone else, and that is why I sold it to them."

Mrs. Fox would not comment on the statement of several residents that a sign "No sale today" was hung on the building on Thursday, when she declares the building was open for the sale of food on Friday. The sign read "Food all sold" when some 400 people flocked to the building according to the statements of many.

It was this sign, following the announcement of several postponements of the sale, that aroused the people of South Boston, residents that have been greatly excited all the food consigned to this action were sold on Monday. No more army food is to be offered for sale until after Labor Day.

New York Profiteers Disgorging Food to Escape Prison Doors

New York, Aug. 23—Signs accompanied today that the profiteers were on the run at last. Aroused public sentiment, passage by the House of drastic legislation against hoarders and the unnerving facts brought to light through Mayor Hylan's investigators of great stores of hidden supplies have combined to throw a good-sized scare into the ranks of the offenders.

Many of them are now seeking to escape prison doors by disgorging the food they had laid away in the expectation of obtaining even higher prices.

According to Boston Attorney Curtis H. Darling, large quantities of stored food were released for consumption after the passage of the Lever law, coupled with jail if they insisted on holding the goods in storage.

Mr. Darling declined to give the names of those who had decided not to invest in the profiteer but he outlined the method used by his office.

Some days ago the accountants worked up the lists of food stored in and about New York city finished their labors, and the results were turned over to Mr. Hylnes. It was realized that much of this food was being held in the city area the so-called no-production period, but it also was seen that much undoubtedly was held for profiteers.

LIQUOR CHARGE IS NOW FACED BY FETHER

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 23—Donald W. Fether, the Cornell student released by a writ of habeas corpus from detention on the charge of causing the death of Hazel Cranee, was arraigned on the charge of illegal possession of liquor today. The hearing lasted only five minutes and adjournment was taken until next Tuesday.

Should the girl's body not be recovered before this time in the meantime, Fether may have to face a charge of manslaughter in the second degree. Authorities are being raised by popular subscription, in order to obtain divers to continue the search for the body, the first fund of $100, to pay for grapplers, having been exhausted.

Fether's mother, who came here from Los Angeles, maintains her belief in her son's innocence and says developments surely will clear him.

The Boston tug Kemp, owned by the Boston Dredging Company, stranded on Londoner Ledge, off Cape Ann, during foggy weather, while on the way from this port to Portland. The craft is full of water, her keel broken and the starboard side damaged seriously, but the owners hope that she will be saved.

GIRL CHUMS IN STRANGE LOVE TANGLE

Involved in the Marital Difficulties of Warden Osborne's Chauffeur

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 23—Two girls who have been chums since childhood are strongly involved in the marital difficulties of William J. Duffy, chauffeur and valet of Lieut.-Commander Thomas Mott Osborne, commander of the Portsmouth Naval Prison.

The middle age revealed when Duffy produced what purported to be a certificate of marriage in refutation of a charge of a statutory offense lodged against him and one of the girls.

The other, according to a court decision is Duffy's legal wife although neither she nor her husband admit the legality of the ceremony, which took them to Kittery, Me.

MARRIED BOTH GIRLS.

The mix-up reached its climax when Duffy and Miss Helen M. Haley were charged with a statutory offense. The case will be heard in district court for a hearing September 4 after Duffy had claimed that they were married in Borough Hall Brooklyn, N. Y., on June 6. He claimed that a previous marriage with Miss Julia V. Mullane, Miss Haley's chum, was illegal and that he had been duped into having the ceremony performed by Miss Mullane and her friends.

Miss Mullane, on the other hand, declared that Duffy and she had duly arranged for the ceremony and that there had been no conspiracy. Cross charges for annulment of the marriage filed by her and Duffy were dismissed in the York County Supreme Court.

The marriage of Duffy and Miss Mullane took place in Kittery, Me., February 18, 1919. Judge Aaron B. Cole officiating. Six days prior to that date Duffy filed intentions to marry Miss Haley with the Kittery town clerk. Four days later he reappeared, stating that he had lost the original intention papers and requested that another act be made. In this set the name of Miss Mullane was substituted for that of Miss Haley.

OSBORNE INTERESTED.

Thomas Mott Osborne has taken a most active interest in the troubles of his chauffeur. His latest step is to engage a lawyer to defend Duffy when the statutory charge comes to trial. Previously he had endeavored to obtain the annulment of the marriage of Duffy and Miss Mullane, and failing in this effort, he appeared before Bishop Walsh of the Roman Catholic diocese of Portland, Me., requesting that the Duffy-Mullane ceremony be repeated by a Catholic priest. The bishop refused to take a hand in the affair.

Both Miss Haley and Miss Mullane have lived in Portsmouth for many years and bear excellent reputations. The city is at a complete loss to understand the difficulties in which they have been implicated.

SAILORS ARE JAILED FOR TAKING AUTO

In the Hingham district court yesterday P. McCay, of Kansas City, and Charles W. Jackson, of Chicago, two sailors stationed at the Hingham training station, were found guilty of misappropriation of an automobile at Nantasket. They were each sentenced to three months in the house of correction.

Special Officer W. J. Philbrick located the sailors in East Weymouth. Jackson told the officer that they met three men in Nantasket who let them take the car for the evening which they intended to return.

John F. Smith of Boston, was fined twenty-five dollars for over-speeding and having no lights. George W. Burke of Boston was fined ten dollars for having dazzling lights.

NORTH ADAMS POLICE SEEK A $5 MINIMUM

North Adams, Aug. 23—Members of the local police department, in conjunction with policemen in other cities and towns in the State, are seeking a minimum wage of $5 a day and one day off in eight, and a petition for this wage will soon be presented to the city Council. At last November's meeting of the City Council local policemen were granted wage increases which placed their pay at the following rates: Chief, $3.25 a day; captains, $4.75 a day; patrolmen, first year, $3.50 a day; patrolmen, after first year, $4.25 a day.

TEXTILE MEN DENIED PERMIT BUT WILL MEET

Lawrence, Aug. 23—A permit to hold the meeting on the common next Monday night having been denied by the City Council, the executive committee of the Lawrence branch of the Amalgamated Textile Workers of America have decided to hold the meeting on privately-owned land at Short and Union streets.

BURLINGTON, VT., FIREMEN ORGANIZE INTO UNION

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 23—Members of the Burlington Fire Department, who recently received a 16 per cent. increase in wages and one day off in five, have organized into a union affiliated with the International Association of Fire Fighters, which is associated with the American Federation of Labor.

POSTAL MEN TO FORM LEGION POST

The first meeting of world war veterans of the Boston postal district will be held at G. A. R. Hall, No. 1151 Washington street, Tuesday, August 26, at 8 p. m., for the purpose of forming an American Legion post.

The sanction of the acting postmaster has been obtained, and he has promised his hearty co-operation.

Graves of '76 Heroes Desecrated, D. A. R. Enters Protest

Lawrence, Aug. 23—Indignant that the graves of veterans of the Revolutionary War should be desecrated by vandals in Frye Cemetery, Methuen, members of Samuel Adams Chapter, D. A. R. have applied to Mayor Samuel Rinehart of Methuen to stop the practice.

The graveyard, which is near the Lawrence line, has been visited of late by persons who have chipped off pieces from the tombstones maliciously, and inscriptions of a scurrilous nature have been placed on some of the stones. The cemetery has been in existence since 1728 and for fifty-nine years was the only cemetery in and about Lawrence.

GRANCE FIELD DAY HELD AT WALTHAM

Lexington, Aug. 23—Grangers from this town went to Waltham today to attend the annual field day of the Middlesex Central Pomona Grange No. 22, Patrons of Husbandry, of Grout Hill Farms. A program of athletic events was conducted this afternoon. The speakers were Charles M. Gardner and Leslie B. Smith.

DEVENS RECRUITS 1,350 FOR ARMY

Camp Devens, Aug. 23—To date a total of 1,350 men have enlisted in the army at the regular army recruiting station here, according to Major Alaska, Panama, the U. S. P. and all parts of the country.

CRUELTY BASIS IN PLEAS FOR DIVORCE

More Papers Filed in Middlesex Court Praying for Freedom

Cruelty and desertion predominate as causes for divorce cases brought in Middlesex County Superior Court.

Mrs. Clara M. Weeks of Everett seeks a divorce from Harry F. Weeks of Melrose, charging cruel and abusive treatment and non-support. They were married in Malden in 1914.

Lyman Hunter of Medford charges Frances Hunter of Cambridge with desertion and seeks the custody of a minor child. They were married in 1911.

Harry L. Coolidge of Lexington seeks a divorce from Elizabeth A. Coolidge of Cambridge, alleging cruel and abusive treatment, and asks for the custody of two minor children. They were married in Lexington in 1910.

Annabel Sebilian of Brockton brings suit for divorce from Haygamble Sebilian of Hopkinton, alleging desertion, and asking for the custody of a minor child.

Edward B. Fuller of Cambridge charges Ellen Fuller of parts unknown with cruel and abusive treatment and desertion, and seeks a divorce. They were married in Brookline in 1911.

Leo M. Maxey of Lowell charges that Julia, his wife, deserted him at Lowell in 1916, after thirteen years of married life, and seeks divorce.

Mrs. Ethel O. Baker of Boston seeks divorce from Harry T. Baker of Cambridge on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment, non-support and desertion. They were married in Brighton in 1911.

John M. Forbes of Wayland, seeking divorce from Lignon Forbes of Wayland, charges abusive treatment and gross and confirmed habits of intoxication. They were married in Quincy, Ill., in 1908.

Japan Draws Plans for Big Navy in Next Four Years

(Exclusive Cable to Universal Service and the London Daily Express.)

Tokio, Aug. 23—The Japanese Navy Department's program of new construction for the ensuing fiscal year includes:

Two battle cruisers.
Three light cruisers.
Five first-class destroyers.
Five second-class destroyers.
Several battle cruisers superdreadnaught type of 40,000 tons each.
Several submarines.
Several gunboats.

The program is expected to be completed by 1923.

ST. SWITHIN'S '40 RAINY DAYS' FAIL; ONLY 15

St. Swithin, famous pinch hitter of the celestial club, failed to perform as scheduled. And yet no good was to while in action that his batting average is considerably above normal. His record for 1919 is 12 runs, 15 hits and 25 errors. There was rain on 15 days. On three days there was only a trace of moisture, but that is added to the 12 of heavy showers to give the old saint full credit, and on 25 days there was no rain at all.

The 40-day St. Swithin's period ends Sunday. With Weather Observer Smith reasonably certain of no rain today of the Sabbath, the record since St. Swithin's Day, July 15, may be computed. According to an old belief when rain falls on that day, as it did this year, precipitation is due for every day of the following forty.

Although twelve of the forty saw rainfall, the showers on a few of these days were so heavy as to more than bring up the average. The weather bureau says 5.40 inches would have been the normal amount of rainfall for Boston during the St. Swithin period and yet 7.22 inches fell, according to their records. St. Swithin is in the clear with 1.82 inches. The heaviest rains were on August 14 when 1.85 inches fell and 1.51 inches on July 19.

The last St. Swithin year was 1906 when fifteen of the forty days were damp. In 1902 rain fell on seventeen of the days. The record year for St. Swithin in the history of the Boston weather bureau was 1896, when there was precipitation on nineteen days or nearly half of his allotment. In 1892 and 1899, both St. Swithin years, there were nine and fourteen days of rain respectively.

Cities and Towns to Fix Own Hours of Daylight

By Universal Service.

New York, Aug. 23.—A campaign for daylight saving is to be started by the National Daylight Saving Association. The movement will provide for the introduction of ordinances in cities and towns throughout the east to have the clocks turned forward for five months in the year, beginning the last Sunday in April.

An ordinance to that effect is to be introduced in the New York Board of Aldermen next month and is assured of passage.

In Pittsburgh the Chamber of Commerce has voted in favor of similar action by the common council. Boston, Philadelphia, and other Eastern cities are expected to do likewise.

Marcus M. Marks, president of the association, said that this plan would enable every city that wishes to do so to save daylight notwithstanding the repeal of the Federal law.

SEIZURE of FOOD in STORAGE!

What Effect Will It Have NEXT Winter?

BEFORE embarking on what seems to be an orgy of "storage food seizure," it is proper that the public and officials look beyond the immediate present!

Agents of the Government, attempting to quickly reduce living costs, are seizing stored food stuffs in various sections of the country, and announcing their intention to force immediate marketing of the food, some of which is in process of cure, the balance for use in winter or the season of short production.

Foods That Are Stored

The Surplus Egg Production of March, April, May and June.
The Surplus Butter Production of May, June and July.
The Surplus Beef from Range Cattle as Marketed in the Fall.
The Surplus Pork Production—(Most of It To Be Cured.)

Unless the surplus of the season's production is available for gradual distribution there is bound to be a scarcity.

The present movement may be likened to the cutting down of a tree in order to obtain its fruit. That is one way to get the fruit in a hurry, but it has a disastrous effect upon next year's crop.

There can be no defense for the withholding of food in order to increase the price. We do not do this. The use of cold storage for speculation deserves the severest condemnation, and every good citizen will endorse common sense inspection of food reserves.

A line must be drawn, however, between speculation and prudent laying away of food for the season of non-productivity. If the course of unchecked seizure is pursued, it will mean shortage next winter.

Most of the meat in storage is owned by firms which perform a real function in the process of distribution, and which have regular customers, whose needs they supply. The success of these firms depends largely on the ability of their managers to estimate market demands and to buy, store and sell accordingly.

The fact that there is more food of various kinds in storage at this time than was the case a year ago is really beneficial when consideration is given to the fact that 100,000,000 people in the U. S. A. are to be supplied and foreign countries as well.

Our business experience for a period of years has had to do with problems incident to the storage of food and we believe that if food supplies now in storage be prematurely forced on the market HUNGER may join our ranks this winter.

PAID AGITATORS BUSY, WARNS RICHARDSON

Attitude of Federation of Railroad Workers Made Clear by President

By P. F. RICHARDSON.
President of the American Federation of Railroad Workers.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—The article appearing in the Boston american on Saturday, August 16, being an interview with one Daniel J. Collins and John Coots, representing the Brotherhood of Railroad Carmen, in which my name and the name of our organization was referred to, is false and in the interest of truth and common decency, it should be corrected, although emanating from irresponsible persons.

As a matter of unquestionable fact, there were only a few places where the members of the American Federation of Railroad Workers withdrew from the service of their railroads during the recent strike of members or organizations claiming affiliation with the A. F. of L. Their reasons for withdrawing from the service were that the members of other organizations already mentioned had walked out and the members of the A. F. of R. R. Workers did not want to work under those circumstances.

There was no literature sent from this office to members advising them to strike, nor were any circulars issued on the subject matter. In every instance, the members were directed to remain at work pending further developments and advice, and on roads where our members were in the majority and organized under our organization they did not suspend work, but on the contrary continued day after day to perform their usual duties as if there had been no trouble.

ARMY OF PAID AGITATORS.

Collins and Coots are paid enemies of our organization. They are the paid agitators to which they refer to in their own interview. They and their associates are wholly responsible for the recent strike of their own members and are now anxious to shift the blame and responsibility, as well as the odium, for their own agitation on the shoulders of some one else.

The railroad men of this country are aware, and it might be well to so inform the public, that an army of paid agitators, such as Collins and Coots, have been traveling throughout the country for several months, declaring that if the government did not grant the increase they are asking they would tie up the railroads to the extent that not even the wheel of one engine would turn.

Having preached this doctrine so universally and so frequently, many of their members believed likewise, and this is corroborated and confirmed by Mr. Jewell, acting president of the Railroad Employes' Department, of which Collins and Coots are representatives, when according to dispatches from Washington, Mr. Jewell declared that "If Congress passes a law concerning the law recommended by President Wilson, they would tie up the railroads, so they would never run again."

In those words Mr. Jewell corroborated the propaganda of his own agitators to all reasonable men, I believe, Jewell's threat has been considered by even many of his own members, not to mention the public, as being foolish and irresponsible.

The Canada Dry Ginger Ale, which received so much publicity during the railroad strike, is composed of lodges and members of organizations represented by Collins and Coots, and has had no connection with the American Federation of Railroad Workers whatever.

ONE LABOR ORGANIZATION.

Vice-President Richards of this organization, who is referred to in Collins' interview, has been working in the New England States in the interest of our organization for several months, and is not very many years ago since Collins had been in communication with me in an effort to secure employment with our organization, and according to correspondence in this office received from him he came from Norwood, Mass., where he used to reside, to Boston to call on me during one of my visits to your city.

The only labor organization of which I have been a member is this organization, and as I have held this position for nearly fifteen consecutive years it would seem that I am entitled to space in your paper to refute the already mendaciously untrue publication.

The American Federation of Railroads Workers is an organization composed exclusively of white wage railroad workers and we have no connection or affiliation whatsoever with either the so-called I. W. W. or the so-called A. F. of L., or with any other organization, and any statements published or may be published to the contrary are deliberately and mendaciously untrue.

JUBILEE ENDS UNITED DRUG CONVENTION

At the conclusion of the last business session of the stockholders of the United Drug Company, who have been in session here since Tuesday, it was reported that the volume of business done during the convention had exceeded not only that done at any other convention, but had been three times greater than had been estimated.

The show rooms at Horticultural Hall were a veritable market for the visiting druggists, and while business sessions were attended regularly, the delegates gave every possible spare moment to the inspection of the display.

BIG DEMAND FOR GOODS.

The tremendous business, the result of the demand for goods by the buying public, both here and abroad, is taken by the druggists as a good omen, not only for their own business, but also for the business interests of the entire country.

Besides the home demand, it was learned through the English delegates that the English people are desirous of purchasing not only United Drug Company products, but any American product. An American product, according to them, is considered "smart."

The feature of the closing session was an address on advertising by Charles E. Murnan, vice-president and advertising manager of the company. In his address Mr. Murnan urged on the delegates the value of advertising and urged national and newspaper advertising as a strong medium of aiding sales. He reported that the company would put into effect in the near future a co-operative plan of advertising for all its stockholders.

NO ROOM FOR PESSIMIST.

He also urged the men to go after more business, forecasting a great boom in the country's business. He charged any possible doubters to be optimistic. "There is no place in America," he said, "for the pessimist."

The convention was brought to a close with a monster jubilee carnival at the Copley Plaza. The entire first floor of the hotel was engaged exclusively for the entertainment of the guests. Music, dancing, vaudeville and refreshments were on the program. Three rooms were given over exclusively to the vaudeville performance.

A separate show was held in each of the various rooms. Thus the guests could move from one room to another witnessing an entirely new show with each change of location, or if they so desired could leave one show after seeing a few acts and visit another.

In like manner refreshments were served in each of the three rooms, a different menu in each room.

For those who preferred dancing a special banquet room was set aside and many remained here practically throughout the evening.

Beginning Sunday another convention of the United Drug Company will be held. This will be a convention for its salesmen and saleswomen. Sunday morning these will leave the Copley-Plaza in automobiles, going out of town for a week's convention.

MORE MUSICAL SHOWS FOR BOSTON

Arthur Hammerstein doesn't entertain such lofty ambitions as his late father, Oscar Hammerstein, but he is one of the most successful of producers of musical attractions. He has turned out many very successful musical comedies that stood out in their respective seasons. You remember "High Jinks," "Furs and Feathers," "Katinka," all Hammerstein pieces.

Somebody's sweetheart, Miss Moore, opens the Shubert tonight, in a new operetta which made a big hit in New York last season. It is said to possess both a tuneful score and a bright and amusing book.

By the way, a signal honor has fallen upon me and my confreres of the Boston American in according to the press agent of Mr. Hammerstein to avoid argument among the leading players regarding the dressing rooms they are to occupy he has hit on the idea of naming the dressing rooms after the critics instead of numbering them and having them all fighting over number one.

The idea is that an actress who might raise everlasting sin if stuck in an out of the way dressing room might hesitate if the manager said:

"All right, I'll tell the critic of the Boston American to move and accept a room named after him. What he will do to you in the paper will be a shame."

I want to spoil this little scheme by advising any actress who gets assigned to a room bearing my name to kick like the dickens unless it is the best room in the house. Then will I not roast her, but I'll run her picture in the paper with a complete list of all her husband.

Hitchy Triples

Raymond Hitchcock announces that he will unfold a new "Hitchy Koo" at the Colonial Theatre on Monday. This makes three for Hitchy as a producing manager as well as actor.

Last Fall when he was in Boston with the 1918 edition he announced that he was through with producing and that hereafter he would allow someone else to run the show. But a highly successful tour which lasted from the end of October until last May changed his mind, and Hitchy will not roast her, but I'll run his picture in the paper with a complete list of all her husband.

Wife on a Strike.

It's an ill wind that blows nobody good, says the old adage, and the members of Ziegfeld's Follies being on a strike in New York enabled Frank Carter, the leading man of "See Saw" at the Tremont, to enjoy a visit from his beautiful wife, Marilyn Miller.

Most people didn't know that the star dancer of the Follies had a husband at all, and she hasn't owned one since 1916, and Miss Miller were both in last year's Follies, and after the show for a few months as singing partners decided to make a life job of it.

But such are the exigencies of the show business that Mr. Carter got a better job from Henry Savage than he had with Ziegfeld, while Marilyn was reengaged for this year's Follies. So they kissed and separated the way actors do.

No wonder had the starring actors of the Follies than Miss Miller dropped on a train and has been spending a few days in Boston with her husband.

The Vatican Choirs.

When Raymond Duncan came to America some six or seven years ago he made a great deal of comment because he announced that he had rediscovered the music of old Greece. The fact of the matter is that ancient Greek music was never lost. Examples of it in the Vatican at Rome have preserved all the traditions of ancient Greece and Rome, and the Sistine Chapel choir often sings melodies and harmonies the origin of which dates back to the birth of Christ.

When all the world was mad about the masters of Mozart, Beethoven, Haydn, Handel, Cherubini, Gounod and other classic composers, the Sistine choir kept serenely on its way singing nothing more modern than Palestrina, and missing one of amazing successes that were unknown to the rest of mankind.

The news that the Vatican choirs are coming to America and will make it to hear polyphonic music from its choirs of the finest imported musical entertainment in many years. It is something no person who professes to love music can afford to miss.

The Vatican choir is music not confined with the Sistine Chapel quartet, but independent singers, who will give concerts on a smaller scale and who will visit many cities which the greater organization cannot arrange to call upon.

Renaissance of the Park

In the days when it was sere and gay, the Park Theatre housed the greatest stars of the spoken stage. Now entirely rebuilt, the last word in style of appointment, the Park is to be the home of the finest and most expensive of film productions. The Park Theatre was constructed out of Beethoven Hall, a concert room very popular in Civil War days. The new Park opened its doors on April 14, 1879, under the management of Henry E. Abbey. The opening attraction was Lotta Crabtree, who owned the theatre, in Olive Logan's adaptation of the Halevy piece, "La Cigale."

In the cast of one of the early productions at the Park were Agnes Booth, Mrs. Gilbert, Maude Granger, James Lewis and W. F. Owen. The latter actor played Dr. Ira in the famous role of Lord Dundreary, while Lewis's role gave an extraordinary opportunity for the display of his talents. Miss Dog Should it was, until she began to look into the matter and found that she was expected to feed her pet instead of having the company do it.

That wouldn't have been so bad if she hadn't discovered that Maurice was spoiled and would only eat alligator pears.

Ever taste an alligator pear? It tastes like very bad squash and costs about $3.

Miss Day says it takes most of her salary to buy alligator pears for Maurice.

The Mighty Fallen.

Dr. Muck has finally left America. Just before sailing he said to a reporter:

"I leave this country without regrets because it is being controlled by sentiments horrible on both sides. Thus the newspapers persisted in stating that I refused to play 'The Star Spangled Banner,' sacrificing me for the sake of a sensation. I did not refuse to play the anthem, and I proved it, but the papers continued to hound me, ignoring the denial."

Muck was interned because he was too prominent a German to be at large in this country, and became the

NOVEL CHOIR TO SING HERE

America has never heard anything like the Vatican choirs from the Sistina Chapel, St. Peter's and St. John's Lateran, which will give a great concert in Mechanics Hall on Thursday evening, September 18.

In the first place it is an entirely male choir, but it sings soprano, alto, tenor and bass like a mixed choir. Some of the treble singers are boys, but most of them are adults whose voices were especially trained from childhood so that they should not change in quality at adolescence.

So difficult and intricate is the music sung by the Vatican choirs that boys cannot be trained to sing it properly except in rare cases. Hence the necessity for sopranos and altos of riper years.

The music to be sung also by the choirs is unknown to America, or known only partially in a few places. It is what is termed polyphonic singing.

Most choirs sing in four parts, and in rare cases eight parts. The Roman choirs are accustomed to sing in twelve, sixteen and in some cases as many as forty parts.

The Sistine choir contains thirty-two members. On festivals it is augmented to sixty-four. It sings certain music with so many parts that there are sometimes a dozen different part for every singer in the choir.

The Rev. Casimiro Casimiri, who leads the choir, is an ordained priest and ranks as a monsignor. In the choir are eleven priests and most of the others are seminarians. The strength of the choir is equal to the festival strength of the Sistine choir, sixty-four choristers not including soloists.

Ten of the members are regular members of the Sistine choir. Twenty more sing there on festivals, thirty come from St. Peter's Cathedral, the remainder from St. John Lateran. The Boston concert is the second to be given in this country.

KEITH'S THEATRE

The bill at Keith's Theatre the coming week has Hermine Shone as the headliner in "Peggy O'Brien." She will be supported by Jack Denny.

The Masteringers in their ninth big season are cobuddinors with Miss Shone and Jack Denny. This great Boston singing organization is opening its ninth season. It will appear in "On the Links."

Shoemaker and Roseleigh will offer their latest success, "Mr. James of London." Joseph L. Browning will offer his latest comedy sketch, "A Timely Sermon."

McISAAC says that

FLORENCE MOORE, in "Breakfast in Bed," was never so funny, and the farce itself is lively if a bit coarse and risque. Plymouth Theatre.

"SEE-SAW," the Savage operetta at the Tremont, has caught Boston so successfully that the management has arranged to lengthen the engagement which was to terminate next week.

"BUDDIES," a very clever comedy with music, offering Donald Brian, Peggie Wood and Wallace Eddinger, continues at the Park Square. It is a charming little story of American doughboys and French girls, and the music is most attractive.

"OH MY DEAR," the latest Princess Theatre offering, is enjoying equal success with its predecessors. It is a hot-weather-proof show. MARY PICKFORD, in "Daddy Longlegs," continues to draw big audiences to the Tremont Temple.

Principally About Peggy.

Strange as it may seem, a girl who can both act and sing is exceedingly rare, not only in grand opera, but in musical comedy. Peggy Wood can both act and sing. Vocally she is not to be compared with the voices of Melba and Tetrazzini, but her histrionic ability, combined with her voice, makes her as comparable to Geraldine Farrar as one ever can refer to her singing in connection with her voice. The fact remains that most of the great singers are very poor actresses.

In musical comedy it is essential that the performer have both voice and dramatic ability, and some very indifferent voices are excused on the grounds of a pretty face and ability to act.

In two or three brief years Peggy Wood has elevated herself to the position of the best singer and actress in musical comedy. These qualities, all with a rare touch that was very pleasing and she sang charmingly.

In "Buddies" she has a part which requires quite as much finesse as that of Jane Cowl's in "Lilac Time," does it just about as well as Miss Cowl did with Lilac Time, and she sings beautifully also. If Miss Wood can do such things in two or three years what a future is opening for her!

Florence Has a Boswell.

The stage manager of "Breakfast in Bed" is a star shorthand man, John Mangan, representative of Al Woods at the Plymouth has just sold a story to a magazine entitled "I'll Say So," and having gotten away with that, has planted the shorthand scheme on the Arrowsmith editor of this column.

It appears that Florence Moore is the star improvisator of the stage. Somebody has to be on the job to catch the things she says because she forgets immediately after she says them. Her role is never rehearsed and she adds something to it at every performance.

Willie Collier is one of those fellows that they are as popular with the other actors as tossed ivy.

But something in the expression of Miss Moore's face, an attitude of the audience causes her to drop a line or strike an attitude which is hilariously funny.

Since the show opened in Atlantic City it has caught the shortest success with "A Parisian Bedroom" in the Park. At different times it has been managed by Eugene Tomalin, John Stetson, Jack Crabtree, Isaac H. Rich and Rich, Fromme & Harris.

Monkey Business.

In "Oh, My Dear!" there is a minute monkey named Maurice. He was originally a prop, but after the opening performance in Boston Ray Comstock, the producer, in what looked like a burst of generosity presented him to Juliette Day, the leading woman, who trundled him around in her show.

I say it looked like generosity, and Miss Day thought it was, until she began to look into the matter and found that she was expected to feed her pet instead of having the company do it.

That wouldn't have been so bad if she hadn't discovered that Maurice was spoiled and would only eat alligator pears.

Ever taste an alligator pear? It tastes like very bad squash and costs about $3.

Miss Day says it takes most of her salary to buy alligator pears for Maurice.

The Mighty Fallen.

Dr. Muck has finally left America. Just before sailing he said to a reporter:

"I leave this country without regrets because it is being controlled by sentiments horrible on both sides. Thus the newspapers persisted in stating that I refused to play 'The Star Spangled Banner,' sacrificing me for the sake of a sensation. I did not refuse to play the anthem, and I proved it, but the papers continued to hound me, ignoring the denial."

Muck was interned because he was too prominent a German to be at large in this country, and became the charge was spread broadcast that he had insulted the nation by refusing to play "The Star Spangled Banner."

Everybody in Boston knows that this charge was untrue. I personally heard Dr. Muck play that piece at least twenty times during the first year of our war with Germany. He played it everywhere the orchestra journeyed and symphony subscribers all over the country heard it.

No sooner was he interned, however, than the most absurdest rumors of his anti-Americanism were spread broadcast, some of them too vile to repeat. If there had been any truth in any of them Dr. Muck would have been sent to jail for many years instead of being interned.

Personally I should have had more respect for Muck if he had actually refused to play "The Star Spangled Banner" and thrown down the baton the day this country and his own went to war. But he had the bad taste to hold his job and the lack of national pride to play his enemy's national anthem.

If the Kaiser had remained on his throne I suspect Dr. Muck would have got into more trouble by playing "The Star Spangled Banner" than he ever did over here for being charged with refusing to play it.

However, the poor man was a great musician, the finest symphonic conductor I ever heard. The worst charge against him is that he is a German.

SHUBERT THEATRE

It is not often that a musical show comes to town with as tuneful a score as attributed to "Somebody's Sweetheart," an Arthur Hammerstein production, which will open the new season at the Shubert Theatre tonight.

The story is set in Spain, where the daughter of the American consul at Seville lives with her father. A young American who has the habit of falling in love, comes into the girl's life, and she proves that she likes him by promising her hand. However, on the eve of the marriage, a Spanish vampire who has also figured in the young man's life, enters the scene and gives rise to complications which make it necessary for the prospective bridegroom to call upon a college chum to help him out of what promises to be a desperate situation. The chum arrives in time to foil the Spanish vampire with suggestions of romance and by cajolery and just as fine efforts to that end are nearing success darned if he doesn't fall in love himself with the sister of his friend's fiancee.

Throughout the musical and comical proceedings are to be seen Alonzo Price, Louise Allen as the second daughter, Eva Fallon as the consul's daughter is also of course in the foreground. John Dunsmore another local favorite, plays the role of a gypsy chief with fine characterization, and Ardelle Cleaves plays the violin, and sings and dances with equal appeal. Others in the foreground are Howard Marsh Veronica, Albert Sackett and Mabel Taylor.

COLONIAL THEATRE

Raymond Hitchcock and his confreres in his latest revue, "Hitchy Koo 1919," will open the new season at the Colonial Theatre tomorrow night. This new girl-and-music show, which has been successfully produced at Atlantic City, is the most pretentious entertainment in which the famous comedian has ever appeared.

Mr. Hitchcock has no less than six leading women in his new revue, which has been written by George V. Hobart, with music by Cole Porter. They are Sylvia Clark, Lillian Kemple Cooper, Ruth Mitchell, Georgia Hall, Florence O'Brien Johnson and Dorothy Sinclair. His male support includes such well-known comedians as Charles Charlton, James J. Doherty and Mark Carlisle. One of the features of the new revue is an Indian ballet of real Indian maidens, headed by Princess White Deer.

The fact that Joseph Urban, Robert Law and Carmine Vitolo have designed the settings and painted the scenery is good evidence that it is not only of a lavish nature, but possessed of genuine artistic merit. In addition there is a Limehouse Nights scene designed by C. B. Falls. The costumes are the last word in Fall and Winter fashions.

MODERN AND BEACON

Sessue Hayakawa, the noted Japanese star of the film in "The Gray Horizon," a remarkable and absorbing romance of love which [illegible] to the wide Pacific ocean, heads the bill at the Modern and Beacon theatres next week. Those who remember the unusually fine acting done by this beautiful Japanese thespian in "The Birthright," "The Temple of Dusk," "A Heart in Pawn," "The Man Beneath" and his many other successes, will welcome the appearance of Hayakawa in this virile romance. Clifford Howard has written an unusual and a most fascinating story in "The Gray Horizon," and Director William Worthington has expended extraordinary efforts on its production.

The story of "The Gray Horizon" deals with a Japanese artist in California, and American, who is at once an artist and a lover and a betrayer of an appealing Japanese girl, and the latter's wife, with whom the Japanese falls in love. The eternal triangle is treated in refreshingly original fashion, and the genius of the artist painting at the behest of his loved one the portrait of the man whom he has killed in revenge, are striking in the extreme.

PEMBERTON INN

Now is the time for all residents of Greater Boston looking for an unusually good time at an exclusive resort to make tracks for Pemberton Inn, the de luxe dining place of the South Shore. This is the ideal time of year at this justly popular eating place, with its varied forms of entertainment. In order to be "in the swim" these days, one must have made at least one trip aloft in the big Curtiss "p" plane.

PICKFORD WENT OVER SCENE 42 TIMES

"Our Mary" Model of Painstaking Actress, Says Director Marshall Neilan

Mary Pickford is the easiest star of filmland to direct, according to Marshall Neilan, who will direct "Daddy Long Legs," the film version of Jean Webster's sprightly college romance and author, now being shown in Boston at the Tremont Temple. Mr. Neilan has directed Miss Pickford in nine of her many productions, and, therefore, Director Neilan should know whereof he speaks.

"Directing Mary Pickford is easy," he says. "She is a director herself, and she has a brain and uses it. She is a very, very painstaking and very particular about details, however, and while she herself can be handled with ease, it is sometimes difficult to direct others in a manner which satisfies her.

"For example, we went over one scene in 'Daddy Long Legs' forty-two times before we were sure it started to her satisfaction. That shows how carefully she takes her work and explains very briefly the secret of her wonderful success. She is undoubtedly the greatest artist in the screen play world today."

New Policy at Codman

Dorchester patrons of the newly decorated and entirely refurnished Codman Square Theatre in this residential suburban playhouse will be received, with the presentation of a program of vaudeville and photoplays that will small compare with the foremost vaudeville and motion picture theatres of the country, when the coming week there will be a radical change in the policy of the house. In the first place the management has contracted for the exhibition of only "first run" feature photo productions. Then again the vaudeville bills to appear will be of the very best quality, performers of the first rank. The "big time." In addition to this there will also be shown for the first time in this city a new picture motion pictures as Ogling Chester, showing historical events and beauties of the Old and New World, a two-reel comedy and the newest photoplay supplement. Arrangements has also been arranged for the initial showing in Dorchester of the first episode of "The Carter Case." The first instalment of this gigantic feature will be shown on next Thursday.

Wise Girl. No Malden Strike

Adelyn Bushnell, the leading woman of the Temple stock company at the Malden Auditorium, has paid the people of that city a pretty compliment by refusing a Broadway engagement in order to play for them again this year.

When somebody suggested that she might be passing up a big opportunity she said:

"Why shouldn't I? This people here have been very kind to me. I have made many friends and I don't believe the offer that opportunity comes but once. I shall have my chance on Broadway."

Miss Bushnell will appear in the title role of "Jerry," the snappy comedy in which Billie Burke starred some season.

COPLEY THEATRE

"Clothes and the Woman," a comedy in four acts by George Paston, will have its first American production on Thursday evening, August 28, when the Henry Miller Players open their 1919-1920 season at the Copley Theatre. The play was first produced at Miss Horniman's repertory theatre in Manchester, England. Last month it was put on at the St. James Theatre in London where it won instant success.

It tells the story of a girl, Sabina Fleming, who cares nothing for clothes or personal adornment, but who, at the instance of her friend, suddenly blossoms out in trend-setting clothes and immediately became the centre of attraction. For a few weeks she keeps a dozen infatuated men dangling at her feet, whereupon all her cavaliers vanish, excepting one faithful admirer, Lord Dorrell Lomax. One amusing situation follows another in rapid succession.

GAYETY THEATRE

There is no more popular comedian on the Columbia Burlesque Circuit than Dan Coleman, who has a style all his own, and who is an artist to his finger tips and undoubtedly versatile and original. Mr. Coleman is not only the star of the Hasting's Big Show, which opens at the Gayety Theatre tomorrow matinee, but stages the production and wrote and staged and produced the dances of the fun-making always a feature with it the attraction.

One of the musical hits of the season, "I Want a Real Friend Like You," was written and composed by this clever comedian.

There are two acts and ten massive scenes in the production, and the singing and dancing numbers, effects, with the cover company are pretty girls present a beautiful and fully rehearsed musical production. Mr. Hastings has spent a small fortune on the show and it is ready for tune on the show, and it is ready for tune, which include a gorgeous display of novelties and bewildering array of effects.

The cast supporting Mr. Coleman is of the best, and includes such well-known and well liked artists as Alma Bauer, Phil Peters, Ethel Alberini, Hazelle Lorraine, Marion Meadows, Wile, William Wainwright, Fred Dale, Hazzard and Stellman, and Frank Cornell.

This will be one of the best and biggest attractions appearing at the Gayety Theatre this season. The magnificent costumes worn, are alone sure to attract the attention of the daily matinees throughout the week's engagement of this clever company of rollicking funmakers.

GLOBE THEATRE

Two of the most popular of male stars in filmdom will lead the bill for the initial three days of the coming week at Loew's Globe Theatre. Hale Hamilton, a comedian of abundant talent, who ranks with the foremost players of the present time, will appear in his latest photoplay, entitled "The Four Flusher." In this production Mr. Hamilton is afforded much opportunity for the display of his comedic talents. He is supported by a fine cast, the featured player is Earle Metcalfe, who will appear in the role of Mr. Hamilton's wife. Mrs. Sidney Drew will also include the presentation of the newest Mutual Weekly in the bill for the first three days of the week, and continuing for the remainder of the week pretty Lila Lee will be seen in her latest Paramount picture, together with the first Boston showing of that great actress, Ellen Terry.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

The vaudeville and feature photoplays announced for the coming week at Loew's magnificent theatre, the corner, would appear throughout the country. Not only will a number of vaudeville artists who made their New England debut at this house be heard, but a picture subject will be presented in which the star is a child. Nothing is more appealing than a child actor, and Jackie Coogan, who is to appear in "Peck's Bad Boy," is certainly worthy of the name. Jackie is a youngster of remarkable talent, and since the time he appeared with Charlie Chaplin in "The Kid" he has been featured in many big productions. Largely on account of his youth, he has a small but distinct following. His performances in "Peck's Bad Boy" are bound to please the many admirers of Jackie Coogan.

Harry Hayden, who has been featured in many big productions, will have the leading role in this production, which is based upon the famous stories of Peck's Bad Boy. Mr. Hayden is a comedian of the first water, and his performance in this picture will be one of the best of his career. Lucille Lee Stewart and Claire McDowell are also featured in the production, which is said to be one of the most humorous ever produced. Mr. Hayden is supported by a large company of well-known players.

Another feature picture of unusual interest will be shown on the screen of Loew's Orpheum Theatre during the coming week. It is entitled "The Heart of Humanity," and is a powerful drama at this time. It illustrates far better than the most eloquent words could do the horrors of war. Based upon the problems now confronting the United States, and demanding the attention of every citizen from President Wilson to the most recently naturalized immigrant, "The Right to Happiness," the photo-play featuring Dorothy Phillips which comes to the Majestic Theatre beginning next Monday, is of extraordinary interest just at this time.

In this remarkable and dramatic love romance, the sufferings of the lover are shown, and the centuries-old battle between the classes is thrillingly illustrated. It is not by any means a propaganda picture. It sides neither with the capitalist nor with the laborer. It is a delightful love story with the vital facts which all men, women and child can avoid being squarely as a background.

HAGEN TELLS HOW HE WON THE OPEN GOLF TITLE

By WALTER C. HAGEN.

Winning the national open championship is something that every golf pro looks forward to and most of them would be more than satisfied if they could get possession of this title just once in their life-time.

Somehow, it was different with me as I was really more anxious to regain the coveted title this year than I was to win it the first time back in 1914.

This is very much like the duffer who won a golf cup once and, instead of being satisfied, never had any peace of mind till he got another to keep it company. Seems disgusting the idea that the first one was a mere accident.

Just as I've come looked better than one on the fifteen fairways I was beginning to look like a champion. Then, when championships seemed to be very much larger than one or two golf cups.

It has been said that the recent tournament at Brae-Burn, where I had the good fortune to win, was not an open championship, was the most spectacular as well as the most interesting open golf event ever played. There were plenty of thrills for the gallery, but I believe the interest was even keener for the contestants.

It is one thing to watch a golf match of this kind and another thing to take part in it. Believe me, there's one thrills just the same as the spectators and I will tell you they were many. The first time I won a big important event it was a cut and dried affair, not that Chick Evans did not force me little before the finish when he came within one stroke of tieing my score, but all throughout the four rounds it was lacking of any real interest.

WON UPHILL FIGHT.

Victory was all the sweeter to me this time because I came from behind and won. It took about all that was in me to tie Brady on the last day and then on the following day I had to attend to my knitting to lose him out by a stroke in the play-off. It will be a long time before I forget that last round and I am sure Jack Brady will have occasion to remember it too.

To begin with, there were many favorites in the field this year and to get by all of them was some job. Before play began both Chick Evans and Francis Ouimet, who like myself had each won an open championship, were pointed out as likely candidates for the title years. Jock Hutchison, who still had the crown in his possession, was thought to be good enough to give the man who could take it away from him an awful battle.

My chances didn't look any too good on the first day when I took 78 and was several strokes behind Hoffner, who was leading Mike Brady by four strokes and Louis Tellier by one. Jim Barnes was a stroke in front of me and Ouimet and Evans had better rounds than I did but I didn't mind a bad start as I kept thinking that it was no use my one bad round and I was due to play better the next day.

SECOND ROUND BETTER.

Whether there was anything in this feeling or not I can't tell you but I did do better in the second round and turned in a 75, my best score for the four rounds. It was not good enough, however, to beat Mike, who was playing brilliant golf and got around in another 74, taking the lead in the tournament, with three of us bunched three strokes behind.

Evans was still a contender and McNamara was only a short way behind and one of the other pros were threatening but not close enough to be taken seriously. I figured that Mike Brady was the one I would have to beat if the championship was to be mine. With this idea in my mind you can imagine my feelings on the next morning when Mike, who had gotten an early start, got around in 73, improving his position in the race and as the best I could do was a 75 it widened the gap between us still more.

It was doubtful whether I could catch up the five strokes on him but I reasoned that Mike was due his one bad round as it was rather unlikely to believe that anyone could move around the difficult Brae-Burn course in a championship tournament at that fast clip that the Boston homebred was travelling.

LOOKED LIKE BRADY.

I'll admit that it did look to look as if Brady had at least come into his own. There is no more popular player in golf than Mike, and Boston was rooting for him to win. In fact, after that third round, which was the morning of the last day, it was pretty well conceded that Mike had the tournament sewed up, but apparently the stitches unravelled, as scarcely had we finished our luncheon than we got word that Mike was having trouble. He was out in 39 with a stretched seven on the fifth hole. This was where the carrier had left him, and the realization that I was still in the fight brought new courage.

Mike staggered home with an 80. He was finishing just about the time that I was playing the second hole so I got most of his large gallery when I turned in. One by one I added to the task. When they chalked up their 79 I knew that I only had a stiff load off my shoulder. All that was required of me was the same brand of golf that I played in the opening round. But under the terrible strain it was something more than child's play.

VICTORY IN SIGHT.

There was a time when it looked as if I would not only tie him but beat him by a stroke or two, but at the ninth things changed for the worse for me. I took five here and the sailing didn't appear to be as smooth after that as it had been a short time before.

I felt that I could still get him by the route if I would come home in better than 37. No one in the tournament had bettered this on the last half and I was up to me to do it if I was to win. The large gallery following Jock Hutchinson and myself turned momentarily to watch the finish of little Johnny Cowan of Stockbridge and the dark horse. At this point Johnny had just accepted a chance as I had to catch Mike one. Jim Barnes was a stroke in front of me and Ouimet and Evans had better rounds than I did but I didn't mind a bad start as I kept thinking that it was no use my one bad round and I was due to play better the next day.

Whether there was anything in this feeling or not I can't tell you but I did do better in the second round and turned in a 75, my best score for the four rounds. THE profiteer's Plumb Plan is that the public can go plumb to Jehosephat. And the public's Plumb Plan is that the profiteers can go plumb to a place with fewer syllables but more heat.

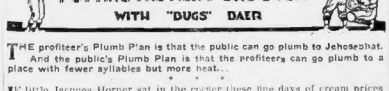
IF little Jacques Horner sat in the corner these fine days of cream prices for skim milk, the old boy wouldn't be pulling any prizes out of that plum pie except his thumb. And it's pantmum to junk that he would not only not get any plums, but he would also lose his thumbnail. Can you beat it?



A DOLLAR has shrunk like a Washington street all-wool suit. An iron man is now about the size of a dime and acts like a ritney. The only stuff that hasn't increased in price is the penny-in-the-slot chewing gum machines. You still put in a cent and you don't get anything.

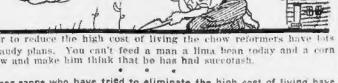
TEN years ago food was as plentiful as trouble. You could scramble into a lunch clinic and grab off a case of acute indigestion for thirty cents and a tip to the waitress if she gave you her phone number and no tip if she didn't.

MONEY was loose as cinders on the New Haven. You could buy one of those one-flight-up suits, fourteen steps to the flight, at a dollar a step. You felt like a porch climber, but the suit was worth the exercise.

COLLARS were two bits a set, two in a set. Now collars are hyped up to thirty five centimes a toss. That's too much investment to be held together by one weak collar button. Nobody knows who's responsible for the rough rest of living. When the Investigating Committee asks the packers they get a Dupol reply. Blame it on a careless employe.

IF we're going to get the food Plumb plan working it's up to the housewives to get busy. If they don't they will suffer. Extravagance will soon be beyond the reach of the well known workingman's less known wife. Everybody will soon be starving like college professors have done for centuries.

THE answer to the dope is for every man to move out on a farm, grow two crops a year and the same number of children. Raise his own corn and crows and his own wheat and weevils. Then he can live up to the Plumb plan and buzz the profiteers to go straight and plumb to that place where we are sure to meet 'em.



IN order to reduce the high cost of living the chow reformers have lots of gaudy plans. You can't feed a man a lima bean today and a corn tomorrow and make him think that he has had succotash.

THE poor sapps who have tried to eliminate the high cost of living have mostly succeeded in eliminating both. People don't want that. They want to live if only for the pleasure of complaining about it. And they don't want to give up their luxuries which have now become necessities. There's hardly a family in the works that haven't got either a cake knife or a Ford.

Jones and Herron Meet in Final Round of U. S. Amateur Golf Title Play

By FRANCIS OUIMET.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 23—Seventeen-year-old Robert Jones of Atlanta and twenty-two-year-old S. Davidson Herron of Pittsburgh met today on the links of the Oakmont Country Club in the final round of the United States Amateur Golf Championship.

In the 36-hole semi-final matches eliminated William C. Fownes, the 1910 titlist, by 5 up and 4 to go, and Herron, a member of the Oakmont Club, where the tournament is staged, accounted for the scalp of Jones of J. Wood Platt of the Merion Hills Club, Philadelphia. The fifteen margin of victory was 7 up and 6 to play. Neither was left seriously as to the respective golfing merits of victor and vanquished.

Both Jones and Herron won their way to the final bracket by way of the upset route. Each in turn put every shot in the bag in his command, being shy of championship calibre at all by only a hair's breadth in getting better each year. Herron is a strapping big fellow of the Dan Gulford type, a bear on heavy going.

He has not had quite the confidence in himself that a golfer should have to be rated a champion, but he has made no showing that can be called a real weakness, and he has been the most consistent low scorer of the entire field. Both men are fast starters as a rule, Herron confining green work entirely to the Scotch lady putter, with which he has more than held his own with every opponent thus far.

How to Play Baseball

THIS is the seventy-ninth of a series of 100 articles by Hugh S. Fullerton, celebrated baseball expert, on "How to Play Baseball." In this lesson Mr. Fullerton tells how to back up plays. These articles will be a feature of the American's sport pages each day. Don't miss them.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON

The value of shortstop and third base play depends largely upon the individual for, like hoeing potatoes, those jobs are just as hard as the player makes them. Unless a shortstop or third baseman backs up and assists in relaying balls, however, his great fielding is of small value to the team. The shortstop ordinarily has more of this work to do than has his comrade at the third station, because he is seldom anchored to a bag in expectation of throws, but can range freely.

The shortstop should back third base on throws from the catcher, following runners up the line and taking the short angle so that he can reach a spot fifteen to twenty feet behind third base in time to intercept balls half blocked or stopped by the baseman.

In throws that are going direct from the outfield to third base he ordinarily remains close to station, prepared to block down the ball if it is badly thrown, or if, in his judgment, it should be caught and relayed back to the second baseman.

In double plays, in which the first baseman throws down to the second baseman, taking throws from the catcher to stop steals. His other duties in backing up consist in protecting the second baseman when he is taking balls thrown from the outfield when runners are "stretching" hits and in being directly behind the third baseman on plays in which the first baseman returns the ball to third.

His range, therefore, is extensive and coupled with the fact that he must be quick and positive until certain the play is not his and run calls for extreme speed.

The third baseman's backing up ordinarily is that of the second defensive line. He is called upon to remain at his post on plays with runners scoring, also with more than one runner on base until the runner passes his station, and often even then can not leave for fear the runner may turn back. However, he should always line up for a second defensive man on throws from the outfield after catchers have scored on hits, especially hits toward right or center.

On plays in which either first baseman or second baseman is throwing to the plate he must cut across onto short ground to be in position to head off wild throws to left.

His activity is greatly restricted because he is compelled to stick close to his station except on bunts, unless the third baseman who starts up after them runs over him to block down balls thrown wildly toward the place from the right section of the field. The kind of wild throws that spell disaster because of the very fact that he is there only a step or two can get into position to head them off.

CARMAN IS MADE THE FAVORITE AT REVERE

The Golden Wheel race, the great annual event of the cycling season, will be run off at the Revere cycle track tonight with Wiley, the former American champion; Carman, the present title-holder; Madonna, the Italian champion, and Corry, the Canadian star, facing the starter for a fifty-mile battle of speed and grit.

Carman is the ruling favorite following his record string of victories, including wins over both Madonna and Wiley, although the latter pair were both at the top of their stride. Wiley having just returned to the track after having his collarbone broken, while Madonna has a couple of spills which made the going hard for him.

They are now back in the best of condition and anxious to attack this prized classic, while Corry promises to be right up close when "Seige" pulls the old bell rope for the final dash.

Every detail has been arranged to make the race a banner one. Extra wheels and motors will be placed at convenient points around the track for use in case of an accident.

The advance demand for tickets is record-breaker and all indications point to the biggest house of the season.

The regular card of amateur and professional events will make up the balance of the program.

RED SOX OPEN SERIES WITH TIGERS

Detroit, Aug. 23.—Sam Jones, who, along with Frank Pennock, has done a considerable part of the mound work for the Red Sox thus far on the backless third swing through the West, was being groomed to toil in today's contest with the speeding and fighting Tigers, who are making most of the pitching Summer days in a laudable effort to overtake the league-leading White Sox.

The Detroit team has thirty-three games left in which to overcome the short fifty-five game advantage held by the Kidlanders, something better than an even break, and, in consequence is fighting every inch of the way. For today's postima Manager Jennings picked Howard Ehmke. The big right-hander has about a fifty-fifty score in his final engagements with the Bostonians, but latterly has been quite successful and was relied on by Manager Jennings to turn back the Red Hose.

That setback game in Cleveland was a sad one so far as the baseball and was concerned, full of bad pitching and indifferent playing, but it was not considerably relieved by a brave battle between "Babe" Ruth and Eugene "Hick" Cudahy. Back in the good old days before the ball players who were not drafted into the Steel Legion numbered among the war, Hick once slapped Owens face. That was because "Hick" criticized the Babe's pitching to the extent of passing the first batter. This time Owens called the premier home run hitter names.

While admitted as comfortably that Cudahy was in the wrong in the game where upon Ruth started toward Owens with fire expressed, Catcher Wally Schang and Umpire Billy Evans and Cleveland and Boston players rushed forward to quell the trouble. Ruth was led off the field by Manager Speaker and Umpire Billy Evans, and before threatening to get Owens later.

Pennock and Bagby were each yanked after the third inning, and five runs having been registered by each twirler respectively. Jones, Gray and Myers finished the game, the former's wildness proving more expensive than the latter's inability to keep the Red Sox from crashing out hits.

CHAPTER XLV.

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

DESIREE LAUGHTON'S mood of regret when she took leave of her chauffeur was timid about opening the front door to her guests.

His timidity was not due to diffidence, as she supposed. It was due to a fancy that he might be brought face to face with some one whom he had met in the old days in Baltimore.

"It is not probable that anyone I have even seen before will be on hand tonight," he reflected as he walked home to his rooms. But if such a thing should occur, I would be less likely to be noticed when I am passing food to people than when I open the front door for them. Gee—some complication!"

Alone in his own room, he smiled at his predicament. Well, it was all a part of the adventure upon which he had embarked, and, after all, it appealed to his sense of humor.

He opened his trunk and drew forth a dress suit that he had not worn since before he entered the service. When he brought his clothes from Baltimore, weeks ago, he had wondered if he would ever be in a position to wear this suit again. But it was too good to leave behind, and a chance to wear it might come.

It had come all right, he grinned to himself. But not the kind of a chance he had imagined.

The clothes were slightly tight for him. He noted with satisfaction that the vest was not as loose as when he had slipped it on soon after his return from France. He was glad of this, for it was proof positive that he was gaining flesh and regaining strength. He wanted to do a man's work in the world.

Some Pertinent Thoughts

"The war does not need me now," he muttered, "so I have not that incentive to get well as quickly as possible. But I do want to tackle a man's job, and the sooner I get husky the sooner I will be able to be in something besides the chauffeuring business. This is too easy a berth for me—easy in one way, hard in another."

He looked very grave as he stood lost in thought. "It's getting a bit too dangerous for me," he murmured. "If I were only in a peace of mind, I'd let matters run. I never thought I'd be such a fool. And yet," his face softened, "I could help it—when he saw her every day? Well," straightening his shoulders, "I can try to fight it down. But if I can't—so clear! It just get away—that's all. There is no use in making myself wretched thinking of what might have been. It can't be now. I'm poor, she's rich. That in itself would settle the matter even if I had not put myself where she would never give me a serious thought.

"But she's kind to me—perfectly kind. She could not know what those words of her's and that hand clasp in the cathedral meant. They made everything look different in me."

Then he set his jaws. "Darned fool!" he exclaimed. "Go and get your brain a cold spread for your job tonight."

That evening, when he took a final survey of himself in his mirror before leaving his room, he laughed.

"Some transformation," he told himself. "I don't look so tremendously like a butler—in spite of the black tie and vest that I am wearing to make my outfit appear less formal. But neither do I look much like the comfortable, complacent chap who left Baltimore a couple of years ago. That fact gives me courage."

Again the Pendant

Desiree Laughton had requested her guest to act as chaperone for the little celebration this evening. Mrs. Duffield arrived early, and, as she entered the drawing room smiled approval at her hostess.

"My dear," she declared, "you are perfectly lovely tonight. I have not seen that yellow frock before. It is both pretty and becoming."

"I am glad you like it," Desiree replied. "It thinks itself that this pale gold color is exquisite."

"I wish her aunt said 'that you had more pendant to wear this evening.' It would add just the touch that that gown needs."

"The pearls will do very well indeed," the girl remarked. "I, too, wish I had the pendant—but I haven't—so why worry?"

"What does your father say about it?" the matron inquired.

"I have not told him yet—but I will later," Desiree answered hastily.

Samuel Leighton had gone into the rear hall in answer to a summons to the telephone, and Desiree lowered her voice so that he might not hear her last speech.

As she glanced at her parent's face when he returned to the drawing room, she saw that something was very far wrong.

"Why, Dad, what's the matter?" she asked.

He answered her question by another.

"My dear, why did you not tell me that your emerald and diamond pendant has been stolen?"

"But it has not been stolen!" the girl protested. "That is just why I said nothing about it, for fear you would accuse some one."

"You should have told me," Samuel Leighton insisted. "Perry telephoned to ask if we had found it. He is worried about it and fears that you did not appreciate the value of your property."

"I wish he would mind his own business!" Desiree said. "I was going to tell you about it tomorrow, Dad. It has not been stolen."

"Then what has become of it?" her father demanded.

"I don't know. It's lost, that's all. There's none explanation."

"There is some explanation," her father agreed, "and I fear it is only too obvious."

"What do you mean?"

"That some one in our employ stole it," was the stern response. "We can do nothing yet; but I advise you to keep your eyes open tonight. You've had Annis for several years, and Smith may be all right, too. I hope he is; but he must be watched."

To Be Continued.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX GIVES HER VIEWS

She Advises Wives to Accept Placidly Their Husband's Harmless Enthusiasms Over Agreeable Women and Not Become Grouchy

By Beatrice Fairfax

(Who occupies a unique position in the writing world as an authority on the problems of girls.)

DON'T, as you value your peace of mind, rouse slumbering possibilities in the part of "Himself" Irish for the head of the family—by silly, unfounded jealousy.

The average man, in the role of Pater Familias, paints a portrait of himself and hangs it in the chamber of his inner consciousness. The portrait is that of a comfortable, law-abiding citizen, fond of his wife, his children, his ease, boasting a hobby or two, perhaps, and as outlets done with romance as with white flannels he wore the Summer he graduated from high school.

All said and done, Pater Familias is rather attached to his portrait, he likes to see himself upholding the best traditions of the country—and his wife, children and home as the accessories to the benevolent figure in the foreground.

It will have to be something pretty overwhelming to make Father destroy his masterpiece and hang in its place a less flattering picture.

Pater Familias' belief in himself as a settled married man, done with romance and philandering, must not be disturbed. Let it be assumed that these things are as inevitable as death and taxes, don't joke about the head of the house in the role of Lothario, for men have a way of feeling that as long as they have the name, they might as well have the game too.

Next to destroying Father's faith in his portrait, the most fatal form of indoor sport for Mother to indulge in is unfounded accusations regarding some woman with whom Father may have chatted for a few minutes regarding the lawn mower, or something else equally vital.

Champion a Dangerous Role

Many a woman's jealousy of a prettier woman has merely called her husband's attention to the lady's good looks. And in the act of defending her from his wife's absurd jealousy, he has made himself the other woman's champion—rather a dangerous role for a sorely badgered husband.

Do not drive Pater Familias into the heroic attitude of defending an innocent lady, as a situation fraught with the possibilities of romance there is nothing equal to it either in life or literature. If Father does converse brilliantly about the lawn mower or the pruning shears with some neighbor's wife or sister whom he happens to meet, do not act as they say a fleeing: "Two souls with but a single thought" and possibly a single suitcase.

Father is probably unaware of that lady; what he is really looking for is an ear into which he may pour the knowledge and eloquence he has culled from a choice assortment of hardware catalogues. He contemplates investing in a new lawn mower, hence his impassioned speech to a brand new audience.

Furthermore, the continued worrying about Father and his possible romantic upheavals convinces him that he is still a devil of a fellow, and inspires him to try out those qualities with which his wife so generously endows him. His investin clothes of a more youthful cut; his socks, ties, and, not infrequently a flower in his buttonhole, proclaim the new faith in his powers to fascinate.

He May Meet a Lady

Father thus appareled may flash across the horizon of a woman who has just dropped a dollar at the fortune teller's, and who may be on the alert against him, but the gentleman turning a bit gray "that means the love of your life, ma'am."

Anything, indeed, may happen to Father if you persist in raising these mad fancies in his conscious—dead regarding his charms and the power he has over women. Especially if he begins to dramatize his belief in these things with new suits, socks, ties and a straw hat with a colored ribbon. Rename Father a Lothario and he will act up the stage properties, regardless of the expense.

Akin to the folly of inspiring him with a belief in his almost demoniacal powers of fascination, is the folly of watching every breath he draws, making him prove an alibi for every hour, opening his letters and demanding a strict accounting of every one who calls up on the telephone.

You are only pitting Pater Familias' wits against you, the basis of sorry business becomes a game in which each plays to win. A jealous woman is one of the great basic laws of human nature, and that is, we all hunger and thirst after forbidden fruit.

You have only to look about you and see the extent to which temperate men have made provision against the coming national drought to realize the truth of this. We never think of walking on the grass till the policeman puts up the sign. Nor is there any way of preventing a tendency to philander on the part of a husband so sure and effective as for a wife to accept, as natural and normal, his little enthusiasms about agreeable women.

Novelties in Neckwear

By Rita Stuyvesant

THE possibilities of the new neckwear for creating the daintiest, most charming accompaniment of the Summertime frock are unlimited. To add freshness to a dress that is beginning to show signs of service, there is nothing that can quite take the place of a pretty neckpiece. Dimity, plain and tinted organdie, voile, mull, dotted Swiss, filet lace, fine net, gingham and linen are all represented among the newest neckwear. The sense of being fashionably attired and well groomed comes with wearing the smart neckwear the shops are now showing.

A vestee of pronounced charm is fashioned from crisp white organdie edged with tinted organdie in various shades. The vestee is short like a yoke and plentifully tucked. It comes up close to the throat and dips in at the bust in three things with new suits, socks, ties and a straw hat with a colored ribbon. Rename Father a Lothario and he will act up the stage properties, regardless of the expense.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

They Do Not Like Her

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am an attractive girl of eighteen and quite popular among both sexes. My only distress is the house in which I live. My friends are all refined and immediately after seeing secured home by them I love them. Please, Miss Fairfax, advise me whether I should urge my parents to move to better surroundings, as they can well afford it and wish only my happiness, or should I give up my men friends? JEAN.

If your home is neat, and you can help to keep it so, I see no reason why you should lose friends on account of your home. I am sure you will agree with me that the friends who would come to see you because you lived in a fashionable neighborhood would not be worth keeping. I have known girls who lived in very large, well-furnished houses, who were far more lonely than those across the street in smaller ones. Learn to make your friends welcome at your home at any time and do not be the first to think that you are ashamed of it. I am sure that the friends really worth having will soon flock around you.

Too Young for Marriage

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen and in love with a lady thirty-two. She has been married before, and says she will make a good and faithful wife to me. Please advise me. E. H.

I BELIEVE your marriage would not be legal at seventeen years of age. And whether it be legal or not you are entirely too young to think of marrying, especially a woman so much older than yourself.

La-May Face Powder (French, Poudre L'Ame) Stays on Better Than Any Other

The Child's Study Room

FIX UP A PLACE FOR HIM AT HOME

ASK any school teacher the cause of the majority of failures among school children. She will not tell you that the children in question are particularly stupid nor that the lessons in which they have failed are beyond their grasp, but rather that the child has not given himself up to regular periods of study in a quiet atmosphere. The child may sit for hours in a room of many distractions with an open book in his hand and accomplish far less than the child who concentrates for fifteen minutes in a quiet room.

A school principal told me that he attributed the large number of failures among his boys and girls, a year ago, to the crowding of the family together because of the coal shortage. This year, however, before school opens, every good housekeeper will aim to provide a definite place in which her children may study.

Where space is limited in the home, this often a decided problem. But if the one really exists for the care and education it should, even if the parlor must be sacrificed, the children should have a definite place for their school books and a quiet place in which to study.

One mother with four young school children has just shown me a delightful little study room she has arranged for her children. The room is the size of a small apartment bedroom. The floor is covered with a neutral shade of linoleum. There are two kitchen tables. These have been lowered or raised to suit the children's height. Several thicknesses of dark green blotting paper have been neatly tacked over the tops of the tables.

Each of the tables has a drawer. The ink, in safety inkwells, is kept in the drawer. The room is divided by a small partition so that each child has a very definite place for papers, pens, pencils and the like.

The plain wood kitchen chairs are adjusted to the child, so that studying here will not bring badly rounded shoulders.

There is a lamp covered by a dark green glass shade so placed that it sheds its light softly over each table. The study room also has a clock and calendar. There are no pictures on the wall, and the soft, gray-green color is restful, indeed.

"In general," said this mother, "I try to arrange so that the children do little or no studying after dark. When the children come home at three-thirty, they change their clothes, have a slice of bread and butter and a cup of cocoa or milk. They study from four-thirty until five-thirty and play in the open from five-thirty until six.

"The older children study from seven until eight, and all are in bed by nine o'clock. An hour is sufficient if the child really concentrates, and two hours are quite enough even for the older ones with more difficult lessons to prepare. Occasionally I find the home lessons too long, but the teachers have always been willing to listen when I complain, because they know I have endeavored to create ideal study conditions in my home."

Where the home consists of a few rooms, often a study corner can be improvised. One poor family used an old chiffonier for storing books, papers and so on. One drawer is allotted to each of the four children. The table is pushed into one corner of the general living room and a lamp is placed on it. The study corner is then cut off by a screen. This, to be sure, is but an improvised screen, being made of a clothes horse neatly covered with plain green cambric.

It does make a lot of difference whether a child gets along in school or not. Of course, there are causes other than lack of a study place; but at least the housewife has done her duty by the child if she provides a pleasant, if bare, however crude, for the study time and then endeavors to encourage the child to habits of concentration.

Fix up a little study place before the children return to school this year. You will be delighted at their progress, and you will save yourself much work when you have them put their study things in just one place.

Interesting Stories

Learning Golf

Some years ago the majority of women knew nothing about golf, and many good anecdotes are told regarding the game. One lady, making sympathetic conversation at dinner, said to a keen golfer, "I often see you in your red coat. Do you need many dogs to play golf?" A young lady said she knew exactly how the game was played. "They get what they call caddies to hunt about in the grass till they find a round stone, and then they hit it into a rabbit hole." A third lady, who had evidently enjoyed a nearer view of he game, said, "It is played by two men. One is a gentleman, and the other is a common man. The common man sticks a ball on a lump of dirt, and the gentleman knocks it off."

Delicate Tact

"To secure nice birthday presents," said Mrs. Postlewon, "there's nothing like a quiet hint or two. I know a girl whose uncle, having grown rich, proposed to visit her on the occasion of her birthday party after an absence of several years. 'It will be glorious to see you again, dear uncle,' I will meet you at the station on your arrival. But I might not recognize you after all these years, and so I think it would be best for you to hold, for the purpose of identification, a long string of pearls in the left hand, and a bit of fur—such as an ermine-lined cable stola, for example—in the right.'"

A Fable

"Now, look here," said a professor to an infuriated bull, "you are my superior in strength, I am your superior in mind. Let us arbitrate this matter, and see which should by right have the better of the controversy." "Oh, bosh," replied the bull; let's toss up for it!" The professor lost.

HEALTHY BOWELS

Nine-tenths of human sickness, from infancy to old age, comes from stomach or bowels trouble, or both.

Headaches, tired feeling, nervous depression, weakness, spots before the eyes, bad breath, sleeplessness, irritability, dizziness and many other signs of sickness stop if you treat the stomach and bowels right and get them into working order.

The prescription known as Dr. True's Elixir, has done wonders for sick people, men, women and children, because it is the one remedy that you can rely on to set things right in the stomach and bowels.

Sold by all druggists, big or little, everywhere. Druggists, as a rule, are very honest. They do not try to substitute something else for Dr. True's Elixir, because they know its value. Many druggists use it in their own families.

Terrible Itching Of Pimples On Neck Cuticura Healed

"My trouble began with a terrible itching on my neck which broke out into large pimples. They festered and burned dreadfully, and as I could not help digging them they quickly spread until my whole neck and chin were covered. My neck looked like a piece of beef; the disfigurement was horrible.

"Finally my mother heard about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and she gave me some and I did not use one box of the Cuticura Ointment with the Cuticura Soap when I was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Harry J. Barrowe, Ferrisburg, Vermont.

TRADING DULL, MARKET IS IRREGULAR

Speculation on the Boston Exchange Lacking in Features of Interest

Prices were irregular on the Boston exchange at the opening and this continued to be the situation during the morning, but at times the market veered on being strong. Trading was very quiet, dullness in house attendance was the rule. Many operators were out of town. The local market was rather narrow but Parish and Bingham, National Leather, Boot and Van Dervoort, American Telephone and Century Steel were moderately active.

Strongest issue during the forenoon included Parish and Bingham, United Drug, common, Warren Brothers and Brothers. At their highest they were up from one to three points, while Warren Brothers advanced four more, but made the gain on a few transactions.

Not much business was done in preferred Swift & Co. was unfavorably affected retained a fractional advance. Nothing of interest features the trading.

Among weak issues were Wolverine Dry & Davis and Mexican Investments. They receded from one to three and two points. Old Dominion declined a point at the opening but recovered part of the gain before noon.

Foreign Trade to Japan

Trade statistics from Japan for June show an adverse balance of more than 25,000,000 yen. Exports totalled 151,157,316 yen and imports 176,222,911 yen. The foreign trade total for the month was 327,378,011 yen, approximating $163,689,006.

Another Reason for Granting the Six Months' Pay

Five ex-soldiers, fully armed, walked into a bank at Chicago the other day, said "Hands up" and walked away with all the cash.

A director of the bank, who had his hands in the air with the rest, was self-contained enough, despite the excitement, to ask the leader of the gang a question.

"Why," he said, "do you healthy, fine looking young men risk your lives in such a job as this, for which you will be hounded by the police and eventually caught and punished? Why do you do it?"

"You can all put your hands down," said the leader, "while I answer this question. I was in the army overseas. I figured that if I got out of it alive and came back home everything would be wonderful. My girl was waiting for me. There were all kinds of parades and cheering and everybody said the government was going to reward us handsomely. I got married. Then I started looking for a job, for the sixty dollars of government money didn't last very long. I couldn't get a job. None of us here could get one. There's going to be a little one at my house pretty soon. And no work."

And then he turned on his heel and with his companions walked out of the bank.

Of course there is no good excuse for the thief or the lawbreaker of any kind.

But a miserly sixty dollars from the government and no work had been magnified by that ex-soldier into a plausible reason why he should take what he could get.

If the government had been as liberal as other governments, if it had granted the six months' pay that more than six million people have asked Congress to grant, and if the former employer of that man had said when he came back "Good boy! Glad you're safe. Here's your job," it would have saved at least one young man from adopting a wrong code of morals, becoming a criminal and being from now on either an object of continued search or a convict.

Every day that Congress puts off action on the payment to discharged men of what is justly due them, it is directly assisting in building up the discontent and false reasoning that make good men do wrong.

Anti-Semitic Agitation Grows in Germany

The following is an interesting news dispatch from Germany:

Not only from the radical side, however, do dangers threaten. Agitation from the Right is assuming an almost desperate character; especially evil is its anti-Semitic manifestations, which go even to the extent of propaganda in favor of pogroms. Advertisements appear in the conservative press, offering prizes for the best pamphlets against the Jews. The government is so far too easygoing in this matter.

Strange to say the Jew has been the victim of the reactionary elements of Eastern Europe for a generation. In Russia under the old Czaristic regime it was a regular practice to blame the Jew for all the operations of which the Czar and his bureaucrats were guilty; to get the poor Russian peasant, struggling under the burden of his wretched government, drunk with vodka, and then to sick him onto the Jew, who was charged with being responsible, some way or other, with the evils that he suffered. It is so today in Poland; and now, even in Germany, the cowardly practice appears to have been adopted. Bear-baiting the Jews seems to be a method by which those interests which hold unjust privileges that are commanding the attention and receiving the challenge of the dispossessed may divert attention from these wrongs.

To the Jews it is exactly like the old cry of "stop thief" which the thief raises against somebody else in the crowd while he escapes. When the high-placed instigators of Jew-baiting are caught they always blame the ignorant peasant and his intolerance. But it is to be noticed that there is no Jew baiting in Bolshevist Russia, where it is loudly complained that the peasants and workingmen control things. Yet, in those parts of Russia which is anti-Bolshevist and where the reactionary class control, the Jew-baiting has gone on in the same old way.

Now, the German "Right," as the Europeans call the conservatives, are trying out the scheme in the hope that these junkers may retain some of those privileges which they are about to lose, and that the military class may have some excuse for existence, and for several other reasons of more or less importance to that class which rarely scruples concerning the means it employs.

Welcome to Sergt. Korgis

The greatest acclaim which has been accorded to a returning soldier in any town in Essex County was received this week by Sergeant Hercules Korgis of Lynn, who captured some 250 Germans during the war. Sergeant Korgis is a young Greek. He was not even born in this country, but he is a thorough American, as his magnificent military service to the country has proven.

Far away among the Southern mountains lives Sergeant Alvin Yorke, who captured an astonishing number of Germans. He comes from a stock which is more thoroughly undiluted American than any other stock in the nation. The mountaineers of the Blue Ridge are the purest American strain we have.

Thus, do the foreign-born, Americanized citizen and the American of generations vie with each other in rendering distinguished service to their common country. No better proof is necessary of the amalgamating influences of great democratic institutions than is presented by the achievement of these two men. It is not blood that is thicker than water, it is the spirit of the institutions which constitute the country, that is thicker than water.

Wouldn't This Be Perfectly Grand?

More Truth Than Poetry

WE, TOO, MAY GET A PRIZE

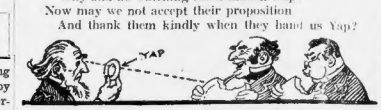
By S. E. KISER

It has been announced by the President that England and Japan may permit us to have the Island of Yap, formerly one of Germany's possessions in the Pacific.

NOW let us end mistrust and cease our doubting;
We have no reason to remain displeased
Because our British cousins have been shouting
About the matchless prizes they have seized.
Why should we be at all concerned or jealous
If they pre-empt the whole sub-lunar map?
Our needs may still be satisfied; they tell us
That maybe they'll consent to hand us Yap.

WHY scold if China must be subdivided,
Or if, at length, they carve up Russia, too?
Their lust for land will never have subsided
As long as there's annexing they may do;
But why object if England is maintaining
A give-and-take arrangement with the Jap?
We surely have no reason for complaining:
They tell us that perhaps they'll give us Yap.

IF they have been inclined to double-cross us,
Why be annoyed or bark back to Monroe?
We ought to take such scraps as they may toss us,
And let the large considerations go.
Too long we have been clinging to suspicion
Why still be watching for a hidden trap?
Now may we not accept their proposition
And thank them kindly when they hand us Yap?



THEY ARE CEASING TO BE MUSHY

It is beginning to appear that many of the people who used to be soft were made so by hard drinks.

VICARIOUS OFFERINGS.

Always, of course, it is to be understood that any moral obligation to shed American blood has reference to other American blood than that of anyone who happened to assist in assuming the moral obligation.

NO OTHER WOMEN THERE EITHER

Eve must have been a silent girl;
Why should we entertain a doubt
That Adam hardly ever heard
His lovely partner say a word;
She had no clothes to talk about.

NO TIME TO BE LACONIC

When a woman asks you whether you don't think her child is unusually bright for its age she expects you to say something more than yes.

Ye TOWNE GOSSIP

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By K. C. B.

I WAS upstairs.
PREPARING TO shave.
BECAUSE OUT in the country.
THERE AREN'T any barbers.
AND I had the razor all ready.
AND THE soap all ready.
AND THERE came a voice.
FROM THE foot of the stairs.
AND THE voice said.
I HAD a gentleman caller.
AND WOULD I come down
AND I said I would.
BECAUSE OUT in the country.
WHEN YOU have a caller.
EXCEPT MAYBE a neighbor.
IT'S A great event.
AND IF the caller's a stranger.
AS THIS gentleman was.
IT'S ALMOST a riot.
AND I hurried down.
AND THE man was waiting.
AND VERY friendly.
AND SMILED all over.
AND SHOOK my hand.
AND CALLED my name.
AND TOLD me his name.
AND HOW for years.
HE HAD read my column.
AND HOW much he liked it
AND HIS wife liked it.
AND AS soon as he'd heard.
THAT I lived out here.
HE HAD said to his wife.
"I MUST call and see him."
AND OF course I told him
HOW GLAD I was.
THAT HE had called.
AND HOW sorry we were
THAT HE had neglected
TO BRING his wife.
AND WOULD he bring her over.
AND HE said he would.
AND CHANGED the subject.
TO A map of Boston.
THAT SHOWED all the roads.
AND EVERYTHING else.
THAT COULD go on a map.
AND FROM out of his pocket.
HE TOOK a pad.
AND I signed a blank.
THAT WILL get me a map.
FOR TWO ninety-five.
AND HE went away.
AFTER ASKING the name.
OF THE family next door.
AND LATE in the day.
A NEIGHBOR came in
AND WANTED to know.
IF I'D purchased a map.
AND THIS neighbor said.
THAT HE'D told the map man.
WHO LIVED in our house.
AND JUST what I did.
AND SHOWED him a paper.
WITH MY column in it.
AND THE map man admitted.
HE'D NOT seen it before.
BUT HE'S all right at that.
AND I'M not a bit sore.
EXCEPT I feel foolish.
ABOUT ASKING the guy.
TO BRING over his wife.

I THANK you.

Director O'Connell Writes About the Irish Bureau

Its Purpose Is to Keep Erin's Cause Before the American Public—Read the Article in Tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser

Daniel T. O'Connell, Boston lawyer, declares that the Irish question will be kept before the American public until something is done about it.

The Irish National Bureau, of which Mr. O'Connell has been appointed director, was organized for just that purpose. American citizens of Irish birth or descent, Irish citizens in this country, fair-minded Americans of all races and creeds will be interested to know just what the bureau is, why it was created and what its aims and purposes are.

For that reason they will be glad to read the article which Mr. O'Connell has prepared for tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser. In it he deals with the whole subject of Irish freedom as it will be presented to the people of the United States during the coming year. You who have followed the masterly series contributed to the Sunday Advertiser and Daily American by Edward F. McSweeney will be particularly interested in Mr. O'Connell's follow-up article.

Mr. O'Connell is one of the most eminent lawyers in this country. He knows what he is talking about. Tomorrow's Advertiser will contain his article in full.

Has America forsaken the men who made her name glorious on the field of honor?

Last Sunday the Advertiser published the first of a series by C. O. Power, in which the writer charged that wounded men had been denied their promised opportunity of vocational training and reconstruction offered by the government in the days of the war.

Tomorrow, in the second article of the series, Mr. Power takes up the repudiation by army officials of the glowing passages in former official pamphlets, and the grudging attitude toward applicants which, he alleges, now prevails in Washington. The worship of red tape and needless delay which have brought untold suffering to hundreds of men who deserve the best the country can offer are arraigned in merciless detail. Read this feature in tomorrow's Sunday Advertiser.

Every fan in New England will be glad to know that Babe Ruth is personally writing weekly baseball sketches for the Sunday Advertiser. Tomorrow he will tell his readers what he thinks of Pat Moran—the great leader of the Cincinnati National League ball club. Pitchers are good judges of men—they have to be. Ruth's analysis of Moran is exceptional.

Francis Ouimet won a golf championship the other day while severely ill with tonsilitis. For the feat he won the additional title of the "nerviest golfer in America." Golf fans will welcome the news that Ouimet has been persuaded to write a weekly golf feature for the Sunday Advertiser. It begins tomorrow. Be sure to read it.

Speaking of golf, there is more in store for devotees of the game. Walter C. Hagen, open champion of the United States, starts a series on golf tomorrow on his own hook. Tomorrow's installment deals with his sensations during recent play at Brae-Burn, where he won his title.

The master criminal has arrived in America, and has been active for some months in New York and other cities, where stores have fallen victims to his schemes to the extent of millions of dollars. Tomorrow's Advertiser contains the first installment of a series of weekly features dealing with the achievements of this interesting band of criminals. It is well worth reading.

A young army flier, whose family counted their wealth in millions instead of in dollars, fell in love with the pretty little postmistress of the Long Island town where the family's Summer home was situated. Later, after serving in France, he announced his marriage.

The family followed out the accepted course by cutting him off. Was the romance spoiled? Hardly. Instead, the young man and his bride are now in Mexico, fighting for a fortune there. The story makes good reading, and is one of the many interesting features in store for Advertiser readers tomorrow.

The pretty models who exhibit gowns for the edification of New York buyers soon will have to go to work. Their profession is about to become a thing of the past along with $30 suits and $10 shoes, it seems.

For some ingenious person has invented an automaton which does everything a model can do, never eats, grows old, loses its figure or goes on strike. In fact, the automaton seems to be the modiste's ideal. Read about this new departure in tomorrow's Advertiser.

Then, there are the comics—better than ever. Don't miss them.

MAKE YOUR OWN JOB A GOOD ONE

Instead of wishing, constantly, that you were in some other line of work, with larger remuneration, comparing your job to that of the man you think has a sinecure, why not use your brain, your muscle, your spare time becoming more perfect in your own job?

Great perfection means more pay with less effort—but you must work to attain this perfection.

Just going along the easiest way won't get you anywhere.

The easiest way is in the end the hardest way.

The man who is at the top did not get there by the easiest way method.

He had to hustle, physically and mentally, to reach his position.

Do you expect to jog along, in an easy way, and win out? It can't be done.

You must combine work, thought, interest and integrity to be a success.

You are sure to win in this way.
